Susan would have been at the normal end of her child-bearing period in 1621.

When John Lume married Susan Halstead in 1615—the latter then a widow (if we are correct) with four children—it seems more than possible that it was a second marriage for John Lume. At the time of this marriage he was probably thirty-three years of age and about nine years younger than Susan. This is not improbable, particularly as it was a second marriage for both. Two more facts give strong support to the above analysis: (1) Martha Loñe (Lume, Lum), daughter of Matthew and Grace (Lange) Loñe, baptised January 8, 1580/1, married as his second wife to Edmund Wood of Shelf on May 21, 1611.* Edmund with his sons Jeremiah, Timothy and Jonas "Oram." (2) John Lume or Loñe was also son of Matthew and Grace (Lange) Loñe, baptised March 25, 1581/2; and in our opinion he married Loñe, baptised March 25, 1581/2; and in our opinion he married first ——— and second, Susan (Whitley) Halstead. Either he or his son John Lume junior became one of the original proprietors of Hempstead in 1644. It seems very possible that John Lume senior was the one who appeared in Stamford, Connecticut in 1642; probably in his family there, besides his son John, was his putative step-son Jonas Halstead and the latter's four children. As there are no earlier evidences in this country of John Lume and Jonas Halstead, it may well be assumed that they came over together not long before this 1642 date and were perhaps induced to immigrate by Edmund Wood, brother-in-law of the senior John Lum; Wood had been in New England for several years at this time.

In the early Halifax registers there is recorded another Susanne Whitley, daughter of Thomas Whitley; but she has been eliminated from consideration since Thomas made a will in 1603 which made no bequests to any daughter named Susan, although several other children were mentioned. It is inferred, therefore, that this Susanne was deceased and could not have been the wife of Abraham Halstead. John Whitley, perhaps the one baptised at Halifax February 19, 1540/1, married April 24, 1562 to Annes Hartley (possibly born about 1546, daughter of John Hartley of Owendun; the latter had children baptised in 1540, 1542 and 1544). John and Annes (Hartley) Whitley were probably parents of the following: Thomas, baptised June 6, 1563; Susanna, baptised June 16, 1568 (buried February 1, 1571/2); Johannes, baptised June 24, 1568; Grace baptised October 8, 1570; Susanne, baptised February 1, 1572/3; Mathais, baptised October 2, 1575 (buried April 1, 1587); Joseph, baptised October 12, 1578; Mychaell, baptised April 23, 1581; and Maria, baptised January 5, 1583/4. John Whytley, the father of this family, was son probably of another John, buried December 3, 1561, who in turn was son perhaps of John who was buried in 1539. It should be noted that Susan (Whitley) Halstead gave names of Grace and Joseph to two of her children, and that both names are found among her supposed brothers and sisters. Her son Joseph Halstead probably married May 30, 1636 to Mary Walslaw, and her daughter Grace may have been the one who married Michael Baislow of Shelf, February 15, 1624.

If this Grace Halstead married the Michael Berstow, later in New England, then she had a sister Susanna still a Halstead in 1635 and 1669. Susanna Halstead was admitted to the church at Charlestown, Mass., 8 (11) 1635; and died at Watertown, July 5, 1669. She bequeathed her estate and debts due her to her sister Grace wife of Michael Berstow, in her will dated Jan. 11, 1667, proved 9 (8) 1669. It is possible that these two sisters were not children of Abraham Halstead.

We are thankful, as we know our readers will be, that it is still possible to secure new information from English records under the present difficult conditions. We hope to be able to secure further information on these connections, provided it is granted that they are saved from destruction.

A CORRECTION OF THE NEW COMPLETE PEERAGE CONCERNING THE BARONIAL HOUSE OF WELLES

By G. ANDREWS MORLAERTY, A.M., LL.B., F.S.A., of Ogunquit, Maine

The purpose of this short article is to correct a statement appearing in The New Complete Peerage, ed. Gibbs, Vol. III, page 290, under the account of the first Lord Clifford, regarding the pedigree of the Lincolnshire house of Welles, whose head, Sir Adam de Welles, having been summoned to Parliament from 6 Feb. 27 Edward I (1298/9) to 16 June 4 Edward II (1311) (Nicholas' Historic Peerage of England, p. 502) is considered, under the modern doctrine, to have become Lord Welles.

Before dealing with this question, permit me to say a word about that monumental work, The New Complete Peerage, the best authority, so far as it has progressed, upon the mediaeval baronage of England. Towards the end of the last century George Edward Coke, Clarenceux King at Arms at the Herald's College, realizing that since Dugdale brought out his great Baronage of England in 1675 no authoritative work upon the subject had been issued and, while recognizing the high quality of the work of Garter Dugdale, nevertheless, in view of the vast amount of additions and corrections, which had accumulated over a period of two hundred years, decided to bring out a Complete Peerage to embody this new store of learning, with Dugdale's great work as a foundation. The scope of Cokayne's Peerage was more restricted. He omitted entirely the "barons by tenure" included in Dugdale's work and did not, save incidentally, deal with the younger sons and daughters of the line. The result was the best and most authoritative account of the mediaeval baronage which had yet appeared and it still remains the standard work upon the subject for the letters O-Z, not yet covered by the New Complete Peerage. Within the last sixty years the scientific study of mediaeval genealogy in England has brought to light such a wealth of new information that Mr. Cokayne's nephew, the Hon. Vicary Gibbs, a younger son of the first Lord Allenham, of the great banking family of Gibbs, and himself a learned barrister-at-law, undertook to bring out a new edition of his uncle's work to embody the latest information. The result was the New Complete Peerage (first volume 1910) which, under the able and learned editorship of the late H. Arthur Doubleday, Esq., is a rich mine of accurate information upon the subject treated, so far as it has progressed (i. e. through the letter N). It is now the last word upon peerage history.

It must be observed, however, that Mr. Doubleday did not become associated with the work until the first two volumes had been issued, he having been previously one of the editors of the Victoria County Histories. Now Mr. Gibbs was not a mediaevalist and in the first two volumes, where the articles were not written by that dean of English mediaeval genealogists, G. W. Watson, Esq., some errors crept in; and the same is true, to a lesser extent, with respect to volume III, which appeared before Mr. Doubleday had fully found his stride. The learned editor once confided to me that he hoped to be able to recall and reissue vols. I and II; a wish which will now probably never be fulfilled.

Returning to the Welles family. In the volume and page above noted we find an account of Sir Robert de Clifford, 1st Lord Clifford, who was born about Easter 1274, being 9 years old at Easter II Edw. I (N. C. P. ed. Gibbs, Vol. III, p. 290). He was summoned from 29 Dec. 28 Edw. I (1299) to 26 Nov. 7 Edw. II (1313), whereby he is held to have become Lord Clifford. He married, prior to 2 Feb. 1299/1300 Maud, 2nd and youngest daughter of Thomas de Clare (2nd son of Richard, Earl of Gloucester and Hereford), Lord of Thomond in Ireland, by Julian, daughter of the great Irish magnate, Sir Maurice Fitz Maurice, of the Norman-Irish house of Fitz Gerald (ib., p. 291). Robert, Lord Clifford, was one of the English nobles who fell in the fatal battle of Bannockburn on 24 June 1314, "aged 39 years." The above facts are fully proved by the records cited in the above account in the New Complete Peerage, which then goes on to say that his widow, Maud, married 2ndly, "without license prior to 16 Dec. 1315 Robert de Welle (Lord Welle), who died

s. p. in August 1320." In 1320/21 Maud was found to be the heiress of her nephew, Thomas, only son of Richard de Clare, Lord Clare, and she died between 4 March 1326/7 and 24 May 1327 (ib.). Now it is perfectly well settled that Maud, widow of Robert, Lord Clifford married, as stated, a Robert de Welles, but that he was not identical with Robert de Welles, Lord Welles, who died s. p. in 1320, but was another man of the same name, it is the purpose of this article to show.

We now turn to the history of the Welles family. Regarding the early members, Dugdale's Baronage (Vol. II, p. 10) has some valuable information, but as he proceeds he becomes confused and erroneous. In 6 Richard I (1194/5) Adam de Welles is recorded as paying a fine of ten marks in the Norfolk and Suffolk Pipe Roll for having adhered to John, Count of Mortaine, during Richard's absence on the Crusade. In 9 John (1207/8) William de Welles paid fifty marks for a knight's fee in Gremesby, co. Lincs. (Dugdale, op. cit.: Lincs. p. R. 9 John). The son or grandson and successor, apparently of this William was Sir Robert de Welles, who was overlord of Maltby, co. Lincs. on 28 July 1249. There is an excellent account of this man by the well known English antiquary, the Rev. Charles Moor, D.D., in his Knights of Edueard I, published by the Harleian Society. Sir Robert was a Commissioner in Lincs. on 27 Feb. 1262/3 and on 13 April 1264 he had a safe conduct to go to the King (from this it would appear that he adhered to de Montfort). On 25 Sept. 1265 he is described as "lately dead" and the custody of his lands held of Gilbert de Gaunt was given to John de Vaux, the Judge. On 24 Feb. 1265/6, Isabel, of full age, was widow of Sir Robert de Welles and daughter and co-heiress of Adam de Periton, who held the manors of Ramesham, co. Dorset, Faxton, Northants, and Ellinton, co. Northbld. (Cal. Inq. Henry III). Isabel remarried William de Vesci, Justiciar of Ireland, the last of the Alnwick Vescis, who died s. p. l. in 1297. Isabel survived until shortly before 5 Jan. 1314/5 (she must have been a very young widow in 1265), at which date the writ for her inq. p. m. was issued. She had dower in the manors of Graynesby (i. e. Gremesby above) and Hellawe and in lands at Withern and Brunthorpe, all in co. Lincs. and in her own right 2/3 of Faxton, Northants., from which she gave the rents to her two daughters, Cecily and Aline, during the minority of her heir, Robert, son of Adam de Welles (Cal. Fine R. 8 Feb. 1314/5; Cal. Inq. Edw. II; Harl. Soc. Pub. Vol. 84, p. 173). The known issue, therefore, of Sir Robert de Welles and Isabel de Periton, his wife were: Sir Adam, son and heir, and two daughters Cecily and Aline. The two latter occur on 27 Jan. 1316/7 (Cal. Cl. R.).

Sir Adam de Welles, the son and heir, was born at latest in 1264-65. On 14 June 1294 he was going to Gascony with Hugh le Despencer and was Governor of the Royal Castle of Rockingham from 17 Jan. 1298/9 to 20 Aug. 1307. Being summoned from 1299 to 1311, he is held to have become Lord Welles. He was dead by 10 Sept. 1311, when his Inq. P. M. was taken. He held a message in Faxon, co. Northants, of Isabel de Welles (i. e. de Vesel), a capital message at Bradby and a message at Wyburton held jointly with his wife, Joan. She had dower on 7 Nov. 1311. His heir was his son, Robert, aged 16 years (Cal. Inq. P. M., Edw. II; Harl. Soc. Pub. op. cit.).

Robert, the son and heir, was born, according to his proof of age taken on 25 Jan. 1318/9, on 1 Jan. 1296/7, and on 9 Feb. 1318/9 it was ordered that he be given seisin of his lands (Cal. Cl. R.). He died prior to 29 Aug. 1320, on which date his writ of dien clausil extremum issued, leaving as his heir his brother Adam, aged 16 years on 22 July last past. His inquisition states that he also had a brother, John aged 9 years, and that he had given the residue of the rent of Graynesby, co. Lincs., to his aunt, Cecily de Welles (Cal. Inq., Edw. II, Vol. VII, no. 274; cf. Cal. Fine R.; Harl. Soc. Pub. op. cit.). Adam de Welles, his brother and heir, was the ancestor of the later Lords Welles, and from this point the descent offers no difficulties. This Robert is the man, according to the New Complete Peerage, who married prior to 16 Dec. 1315 Maud de Clare, widow of Robert, 1st Lord Clifford. In other words, we are asked to believe that a man born in 1297 married a woman, who was the widow of a man born in 1274 and who was married to her first husband shortly before 2 Feb. 1299/1300, when their eldest son, Roger de Clifford, was born. Furthermore, the latest possible date at which Maud de Clare could possibly have been born was nine months after 29 Aug. 1287, at which date her father, Thomas de Clare, lord of Thomond, died (N. C. P. Vol. III, p. 246, note "c"). It seems, therefore, quite obvious that there is something wrong somewhere.

At this time there was living another Sir Robert de Welles, whose career was passed, so far as we know it, on the Western Marches in Cumberland and Westmorland. Here it must be noted that Robert, Lord Clifford, the first husband of Maud de Clare, was a great Cumberland and Westmorland magnate, by virtue of his mother's heritage, she being the daughter and co-heir (and eventually in her issue the sole heir) of Robert de Vipont, the Baron of Appleby in Westmorland. It was through this Vipont marriage that the Cliffords, originally a Gloucestershire family, were transplanted into Westmorland and became a great Northern house. This Robert de Welles appears to have been a laudless but knightly cadet in the service of Idonea de Vipont, aunt of Robert, Lord Clifford. She married 1st, Roger de Leyburn, and 2ndly, John, Lord Cromwell, and died s. p. before

18 Nov. 1333 (N. C. P. Vol. III, p. 553). This Idonea and her nephew, Robert, Lord Clifford, held the castles of Brough and Pendragon in Westmorland. In Nov. 1316 Robert de Welles was made "custos" of Brough Castle (Cumb. & West. Ant. & Arch. Soc. Trans. n. s. Vol. III, p. 320). Prior to 16 Dec. 1315 he had married, without licence, Maud, widow of Robert, Lord Clifford, and his lands henceforth appear to be those of his wife's inheritance and such as she held in dower. He appears frequently as a soldier on the Cumberland and Westmorland border fighting against the Scots from this date until 29 Aug. 1326, when he was in Scotland arranging a truce with that kingdom on behalf of the King. (Cal. Pat. R.)

On 20 May 1324 he had been appointed "custos" of Pendragon Castle, co. Westmorland. His career is fully set forth by the Rev. Dr. Moor in his Knights of Edward I (Harl. Soc. Pub., Vol. 84, p. 176). Dr. Moor correctly married him to the widow of Lord Clifford, but he tells us nothing about his family or his subsequent biography. Regarding the former I am able to add some information. Among the deeds of the ancient Westmorland house of Strickland of Sizergh, preserved at Sizergh Castle, there is a marriage contract, dated 1323, for the marriage of Thomas, eldest son and heir apparent of Sir Walter de Strickland of Sizergh, to Cecily, daughter of Sir Robert de Welles (Sizergh Deeds cited in Strickland of Sizergh by Henry Hornvold-Strickland, P. S. A.). This Cecily was alive, as widow of Sir Thomas, as late as 1378/9, when she appointed her younger son, Sir Thomas de Strickland, her steward in Westmorland (ib.). It is evident that this Cecily de Welles was the daughter of Sir Robert de Welles of Westmorland and, in view of the repetition of the name Cecily, it is suggested that this Sir Robert was a younger brother of Sir Adam de Welles, 1st Lord Welles, and the son of Sir Robert, who died in 1265. It is further suggested that Maud de Clare was probably his second wife and that Cecily de Strickland was the child of an unknown first wife, although child marriages were common at this period. From Sir Thomas and Cecily de Strickland descended the later Stricklands of Sizergh. They were also the ancestors of Mr. Edward Carleton, the early settler of Rowley, Mass. (1638).

almost to those times, the present one gradual change in pronunciation of names King William I (the first) was the first but his son and the rest of the English Kings had good education for the time. Now generally it is something through copies of books which are in the 1800's often corrected & improved. I think about four different editions of the 'new' ones in one paragraph.

One up to these families is that of some, but that don't happen until about 1800 or so and then become very common. The end of the 18th century, but when the books were first over the new 'country' names. That is, I think the names. An example, see Table (Tablet) which see the Henry King of William's name which has three names (William). This name was really de Herion, then his name was in Henry.
It is hard to know the age of the first. It is to the bonâ fide inquirer, are not, perhaps, those which raise any difficulty in the minds of others. It seems to be supposed that heralds and genealogists have some mysterious and recondite power, which enables them with comparative ease and certainty to reproduce the history of families; and there have been times when their recorded statements and pedigrees have been generally accepted with profound and implicit faith. Pedigrees, when they have been adopted by families, become the authentic exposition of their claims. They are transmitted from generation to generation with jealous care, and yet they may be all the time founded on invention. The compilers of pedigrees were, like others, not exempt from error; and it must be added with regret that in many cases their anxiety to gratify their employers has led them to neglect the ordinary laws of historical inquiry, and to put forth hasty statements, which have done much to discredit a branch of knowledge which is capable of affording results of real value.

With a view to convey some notion of the difficulties which the historical inquirer encounters when he attempts to investigate the origin of English families, it may be desirable to notice some instances of those faults and defects which continually present themselves in the existing family history, and which either deter many persons from the study, or stand in the way of bonâ fide inquiry.

1. Impossibilities.

We are, for example, informed by one of the peerages that Herveius Walter, father of Theobald Walter, Butler of Ireland, in the reign of Henry II., and ancestor of the Dukes and Marquises of Ormond, was 'a companion of the Conqueror,' i.e. that he had in 1066 accompanied him from Normandy. This, no doubt, carries back the family of Butler to the era of the Conquest. But when we look into the facts of the case we find that this Herveius Walter, father of Theobald,¹ was in the time of Henry II. a considerable benefactor to Butley Priory, Suffolk; ² and this being a century after the Conquest, it is impossible that he could have been 'a companion of the Conqueror;' while in addition, as his son Theobald Walter was certainly contemporary with Henry II., Herveius Walter was himself evidently a contemporary of King Stephen and of the Empress Matilda, granddaughter of the Conqueror. It would seem that the slightest consideration would have precluded the possibility of such a chronological error.

2. Inventions.

The peerages inform us that 'Adam de Aldithley,' ancestor of the Earls of Derby, attended Duke William to England in 1066, 'accompanied, from Aldithley in ¹ The filiation is ascertained by means of charters of Theobald Walter, founding Cockersand Abbey, Lancashire, and Wothey Abbey, Limerick, from which we learn that Herveius Walter was his father, Hubert Walter, Archbishop of Canterbury, his brother, and Ranulph de Glanville his friend. (Mon. Angl. ii. 631, 1034.) See BUTLER in the alphabetical series.

² Mm. Angl. ii. 245.

Re: Butler, Stanley

Normandy,' by his sons 'Lydulph and Adam de Aldithley,' and obtained large possessions by gift of the Conqueror. We have here a minuteness of detail which wears all the appearance of authenticity. 'Aldithley' (the origin of the name Audley) was, it appears, in 'Normandy.' Nevertheless, when we come to examine where Aldithley really was, it is ascertained, not merely that there is not the slightest trace of such a place in Normandy (as we might indeed have anticipated from its Gothic etymology), but that the real Aldithley from which the family derived its name of Audley was in Staffordshire. A mistake of this nature, so obvious on the slightest inquiry, forcibly shows the carelessness of which the history of families in England has been unfortunately the subject.

The same account of the Stanleys, Earls of Derby, is further instructive. 'Adam de Aldithley' and his two sons 'Lydulph and Adam de Aldithley,' who are said to have accompanied the Conqueror, are purely imaginary personages. There is no trace of their existence in the records; nor has any one ever attempted to establish their reality by evidence. They owe their origin to the ingenious process of making two persons out of one, assigning the names of one generation to imaginary ancestors in another. Amongst other faults this pedigree invents a Henry de Stonley or Stanley, a maternal ancestor (as alleged) of this family. His imaginary son-in-law lived in the reign of Henry I.,¹ so that he himself must have lived in that of the Conqueror; and yet not only is Domesday silent as to his existence, but Stonley or Stanley itself does not appear to have existed in 1086, for Domesday takes no notice of it. The name of Stanley appears for the first time in the year 1130,¹ when it was borne by Robert de Stanley, Viscount of Stafford.² Henry de Stonley is a pure myth. Nothing can be more instructive than this example of the mode of treating English pedigrees. If imagination is allowed to exercise such strange influence even in the case of the most illustrious families in England, what must have been the fate of others of less eminence.

3. Contradiction to facts.

The history of the Ashburnhams, Earls of Ashburnham, furnishes an instance of the legendary character of much of the early family history of England, and of its inconsistency with matter of fact. This pedigree is one which is usually announced with a confidence and an apparent authority which are truly imposing, and which have doubtless brought conviction to the minds of most ment, was son of Lydulph, who came from Normandy with the Conqueror at the same time as his father Adam. Lydulph was therefore living at the Conquest, and his son Adam, in the time of Henry I., and Henry de Stanley, the imaginary father-in-law of the latter, must have been contemporary with the Conqueror. This personage appears from the peerage statements to have been owner of Aldithley and Balterley, while Domesday shows that Balterley, together with Aldithley and Talc, belonged in the Conqueror's reign to Gamel, a native thane (Domesday, Stafford, p. 251.) Stanley in Stafford is not mentioned.

including Staffordshire and Worcestershire). A party to the sentence of attainder against Lord Hungerford in 1459, he was summoned to parliament in 1482. Through- out his legal career he acted as arbitrator and as a referee. He was an executor for William, Lord Botreaux (d. 1462), gave legal advice to Humphrey Stafford, duke of Buckingham receiving fees from 1453 until the duke's death in 1460) and to Sir John Fastolf (1453), and was retained by the dean and chapter of Wells, 1454-5. He reformulated laws for Mendip, Somerset (c.1470), and in the Carrier's case (1473) it seems to have invented the doctrine of 'breakeing bulk' to mitigate the rule that a carrier stealing goods entrusted to him was not guilty of felony.

Choke held manors at Long Ashton, Temple Cloud, and Stanton Drew in Somerset, and at Ransom in Dorset. He was married twice. His first wife was Joan, daughter of William Pavay, member of parliament for Bristol; they had four sons and two daughters. Joan's brother was Hugh Pavay (d. 1496), bishop of St David's, whose will contained bequests to Choke's son John, and to Nicholas and Edmund Choke, the bishop's great-nephews. Choke and his second wife, Margaret Morris, who had earlier been married to William Gifford of Gloucester, had no children. According to John Leland, he 'kept his chief house at Long Ashton (bought in 1454); worth 600 marks yearly it had great furniture of silver', which was mentioned in Choke's will of 3 July 1483. He was buried in the church at Long Ashton, which contains his monument and effigy. Margaret directed her executors to make a gift for a new window at the church, and among her bequests was the sum of 6 marks yearly for four years to one John Langley, a poor boy of the parish, to enable him to study at Oxford. With others Richard alienated land (1482) to Ortel College, Oxford, and with Margaret, was pardoned in 1484 for an unlicensed mortmain grant. His will contains instructions for masses to be celebrated at Long Ashton for his soul, for gifts to neighbouring parishes, to the abbots of Keynsham and Glastonbury, and for the repair of Wells Cathedral and of the 'feable ways and bridges' of Somerset.

Cholmeley [Cholmely], Hugh (c.1574-1641), religious controversialist, was the eldest surviving son of John Cholmeley (Jl, c.1550-c.1600), a gentleman in the service of the puritan Henry Hastings, third earl of Huntingdon, and Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh Turner of Burton upon Trent, Staffordshire. He had three brothers and five sisters who survived until adulthood. His father was itinerant, living in Derby, Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire, and York, the latter two as a result of his position in Huntingdon's household. Together with Joseph Hall, who describes them as 'Partners of one Lesson from our Cradles' (Works, 1.xv), Cholmeley went to Ashby-de-la-Zouch grammar school, staffed by a series of radical protestant masters. In 1589 he matriculated as a pensioner at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, going up at the same time as Hall, and being 'for many Years Partners of one Bed' (ibid.). He graduated BA early in 1593, obtained a fellowship at Emmanuel in 1595, proceeded MA in 1596, was incorporated at Oxford in 1598, and proceeded BD in 1603.

In 1601, when Peter Blundell's plans for founding a grammar school in Tiverton, Devon, began to be implemented, Hall was offered the mastership but recommended Cholmeley in his place; the latter was accordingly appointed. His work was apparently supervisory as the school took nearly three years to build. In 1604 he resigned on his presentation to the Clare portion of Tiverton rectory, which he held until his death. At an unknown date he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Bedes of Exeter, who was sufficiently educated to be left her husband's books. They had five sons and five daughters by 1620: of these, two sons and two daughters are mentioned in his will.

When Joseph Hall became bishop of Exeter in 1627 Cholmeley, as a trusted friend, was appointed bishop's chaplain and, in August 1628, a prebendary of the cathedral. Subsequently he involved himself in defending Hall when, in The Olde Religion (1628), the bishop entered anew the controversy over whether the Church of Rome was a true one. Henry Burton in The Seven Vials (1628) described Arminians as 'razing the very foundation of mans salvation' (p. 111), nurturing Roman Catholics, leading protestants to pope, and stating that all agree some can be saved in the Roman church, and he categorized Hall as one of them. In The State of the now-Roman Church (1629), written, Cholmeley states somewhat ingenuously, not in friendship but in canonical obedience to his bishop, Cholmeley exposed Burton's interpretation of part of Revelation as full of errors in exegesis, inconsistency, sophistry, and logical flaws. He disputed Burton's contention that the Roman church denied and cursed saving and justifying faith and the necessity of grace, and argued that wrong papal doctrine did not preclude some Roman Catholics from salvation, nor deprive that church of all saving offices. But he overstated his case by ignoring many of Hall's qualifications as to how far Rome could be regarded as a true visible church. Cholmeley's wrath was reserved for Burton's statement that Hall and others insisted that the Roman Catholic church was a true one, though not a true believing church. Burton had betrayed with a kiss, his meek, and sweet spirited Author, a Reverend Antistes of the Church of England, our divine Seneca' (H. Cholmeley, The State of the now-Roman Church, 1629, 76-7). As a pious Cholmeley parodied Horace: But for Gods sake tell me, I thee pray, Why thou so lovingly dost Exon slay? (ibid., 77-8) and attacked Burton for damaging Hall's reputation.

Very blue-blooded Col George Reece came to Virginia in the early 1600's, as an aide to the Governor.
Back then the eldest son inherited the manor and most of the fortune. George was a younger son, but, being a member of such a illustrious family, even the new governor deferred to him.

It has been fun collecting all the material in this binder, especially because we (our family) descend from all those blue bloods through him. He is one of our Clyton ancestors, starting with the wife of John Whiting Clyton³ (son of the botanist John² and grandson of the eminent Attorney General John Clyton)

so unusual to try at least to promote greater national unity, before the inevitable next onset of the foreign foe. But Edward's policy, so far as he can be said to have had any consistent plan besides the introduction of Normans, only served to encourage provincial feeling and to divide north from south. For he was fain to play off the power and the jealousy of the northern Earls of Mercia and Northumbria against Wessex and the other earldoms of the south presided over by the House of Godwin.

By this means the Confessor on one occasion succeeded in having Godwin and his family driven from the realm. But next year a counterrevolution took place. Godwin and his son Harold came back from their places of exile in Flanders and Ireland. They sailed up and down the Channel, landing at various points to ravage after the cruel manner of warfare in those days; none the less south England rose to fight on their side. The seafaring population swarmed out of the Channel ports to join their flotilla, while forces from Sussex and Surrey marched on London, all vowing to 'live or die' with Earl Godwin. When finally he floated up the Thames, the men of London let his ships pass unopposed under their bridge. Then and there he dictated terms to the King, for whom no one seemed eager to fight. Godwin's chief Norman enemies fled the land, and his House was restored to all its private estates and public offices.

The underlying motives of the politics of this troubled reign are obscure. The evidence we have is fragmentary, and modern historians equally well informed of all that there is to know have differed widely from one another in their estimate of the character and policy of the chief actors. It is probably safe to say that dislike of the Normans was a strong motive in the popular reception of the ambitious Earl, a year after his outlawry had been so easily decreed. But to speak of him and of his son Harold after him as 'national heroes' may be misleading, because 'national' feeling as we know it had not come into existence. The men of Wessex, of the Severn valley and of Danelaw might each and all dislike the Normans, but they knew not one another and had no common loyalty. The appeal to unite in defence of England as a whole was never made to them in the eleventh century, because it would not have been understood. If it had been understood, a few thousand armoured cavalry would not have been able to conquer and share up England after Hastings.

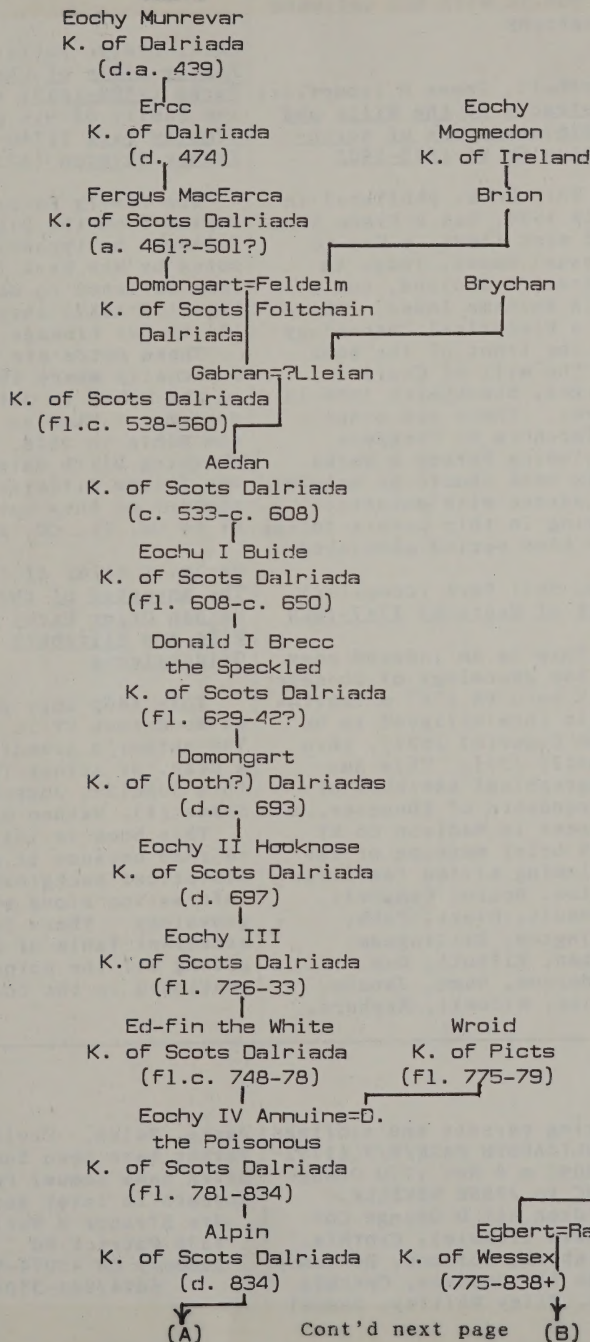

Godwin died the year after his triumphant return, bequeathing to his ablest son Harold the chief direction of the King's government, the earldom of Wessex, the affection of England south of Thames, and vast estates scattered over many shires. so unusual to try at least to promote greater national unity, before the inevitable next onset of the foreign foe. But Edward's policy, so far as he can be said to have had any consistent plan besides the introduction of Normans, only served to encourage provincial feeling and to divide north from south. For he was fain to play off the power and the jealousy of the northern Earls of Mercia and Northumbria against Wessex and the other earldoms of the south presided over by the House of Godwin.

claims to the English throne. After suffering an overwhelming defeat at Tinchebrai (1106), Robert was imprisoned in Cardiff Castle, and Normandy was united to England. William, Robert's son, secured the assistance of Louis VI, king of France, and the counts of Flanders and Anjou. To defend himself against this combination, Henry married his daughter, Matilda, to the Emperor Henry V, gained over the Count of Anjou, and in 1119 defeated the French king at Brémule (Brennville). William, Henry's only son, was drowned in 1120 in the White Ship.

During these years Henry I had been busy with religious disputes, especially the investiture question. (See ANSELM.) The Curia Regis became the center of an administrative system by which the counties and the sheriffs were connected with the central government. The financial side of the Curia Regis, known as the exchequer, was developed. A monastic revival took place during the reign, and the Austin canons and the Cistercians settled in England. Henry died suddenly at Angers in Normandy, and was buried at Reading. S. W. X.

HENRY II, 1133–89, king of England, was the eldest child of Matilda, daughter of Henry I, and of Geoffrey PLANTAGENET, and succeeded Stephen as king in 1154. From his father and mother he inherited Anjou, Touraine, Normandy, and Maine; while through his wife, ELEANOR OF AQUITAINE, the divorced queen of Louis VII, he secured Poitou, Périgord, Limousin, and Gascony, together with claims on the county of Toulouse, and a nominal suzerainty over the land on the west bank of the Rhône. A vigorous, hard-working man, skilled in diplomacy, and a lover of the law, Henry revoked his predecessor's grants of of crown lands, destroyed the "adulterine" castles built by the barons, expelled all mercenaries, and abolished the "fiscal" earldoms. To free himself from dependence on the barons, he took from them scutage in lieu of personal service for 40 days (1159). Wales and Scotland were forced to recognize his authority. A quarrel with the Archbishop of Canterbury, THOMAS A BECKET, led, however, to the Constitutions of Clarendon (1164), the effect of which was in great part destroyed by the murder of Becket (1170). To avoid the papal legates, Henry entered on conquest of Ireland (1171). See IRELAND, History.

In 1166 the Assize of Clarendon compelled all men to come, when required, to the county courts, and brought the barons within reach of the law. In 1170 the Inquest of Sheriffs was followed by the dismissal of most of the sheriffs. The barons rose with the king's own sons, William the Lion of Scotland, Philip of Flanders, and Matthew of Boulogne. But the rebellion was speedily crushed by Henry II, who, having captured William the Lion, forced him to sign the Treaty of Falaise (1174). In 1176 the Assize of Northampton, in 1181 the Assize of Arms, in 1184 the Assize of Woodstock, were issued. By these laws the baronial power was still further checked, the people were armed, and the king's supremacy over the forests firmly established. In 1188, to raise money for a crusade, the Saladin tithe was collected and personal property was taxed. Henry's later years were full of trouble. Philip Augustus, the French king, intrigued with Henry's sons against their father, who at length, worn out and disillusioned, died at Chinon. Henry's reign marks the development of the jury system. He

HENRY I, 1068–1135, king of England, the younger son of WILLIAM I and Matilda, was born at Selby in Yorkshire. He succeeded his brother, William Rufus, in 1100, and strengthened his position by marrying Eadgyth (known as Matilda), daughter of Malcolm, king of Scotland, and of Margaret, granddaughter of Edmund Ironside. His charter of liberties, his recall of Anselm, and his arrest of Flambard testified to his prudence and sagacity. Robert of Belesme persuaded Robert, Henry's elder brother, to assert his Castle was new in the 11th century, when a castle built to guard the crossing of the River Tyne.

Begun nine centuries ago, the Tower of London was an impressive symbol of Norman rule. Footfalls of the doomed echoed there when the tower's massive walls confined the realm's most famous prisoners, among them Sir Thomas More and Sir Walter Raleigh. Today this fortress on the Thames still guards the crown jewels.

Major Domesday Landholders

NEWBERRY LIBRARY

Binding of Domesday Book and the chest in which the volumes were formerly kept are represented in these two old woodcuts of facsimiles

DOMESDAY BOOK, or DOOMSDAY BOOK, the record of a statistical survey of a large portion of England made for William I, the Conqueror, in 1085-87. The original manuscripts were incorporated in two volumes of unequal size and contained information regarding the ownership, state of cultivation, and area of cultivation of lands, population in its various classes of vassals (freemen, villeins, cotters and serfs) and, for some areas, the livestock. It was apparently intended to afford a survey of the fiscal state of the kingdom and its taxable capacity. It was printed in two volumes in 1783 and a supplement was printed in 1816. A number of explanations have been advanced as to the reason for the title, the most common being that because of its completeness it was in effect a "day of judgment" for establishment of the facts it contained.

Major Domesday Landholders

Although many of the landholders listed in the Domesday Book are well-known to historians, others have vanished into obscurity, and we know little or nothing about them.

This, then, is not a complete list of all the names which have appeared in the previous pages, but it includes almost 200 brief biographical notes of the most important names together with a few other people who are known for some other aspect of their lives.

d'Abetot, Urso Also called Urso of Worcester. From Abbetot, Seine-Maritime. Brother of Robert the Bursar. Sheriff of Worcestershire. Helped crush revolt of Roger of Hereford, 1075. king to succeed simultaneously to rule in England and Normandy. Disturbances in the south-west, where Baldwin de Redvers raised rebellion in Exeter, and simultaneous invasions of his territory from the Welsh and Scots forced him to concentrate on England and leave Normandy, which looked to him to keep the peace and hold back the raids of Geoffrey of Anjou. He did not come to Normandy until the spring of 1137, by which time many parts were ravaged and impoverished by war; troubles in England forced him to recross the Channel in November. Normandy was left in the charge of William of Roumare and other justiciars, who were required, as Orderic bitterly commented, to 'do what he had failed to do himself: punish the malcontents and restore order for the wretched people.'⁸⁶ Stephen never returned himself. His failure in Normandy was fatal; too many barons had lands on both sides of the Channel, and they worked to restore their inheritance undivided under a single lord. Rebels like Baldwin de Redvers, when driven out of England, retired to raise rebellion in their Norman lands. Once Geoffrey of Anjou had conquered Normandy, and was in a position to hand it on to his son Henry, it became clear that, whatever might happen in Stephen's lifetime, the only satisfactory solution to the dilemma of these cross-Channel lords was the ultimate succession of young Henry in England also. But eighteen years of uneasy rule, interrupted from time to time by local risings or open civil war, had to pass before all parties accepted the principle of Henry's succession, and this happened only a year before Stephen's death.

The events of Stephen's reign help to bring into sharper focus the nature of feudal assumptions in this third generation after the conquest, and the degree of success achieved by church reform. Administrative development becomes clearer after Henry II's accession and the restoration of more effective royal power. Up to 1138/9 Stephen, in spite of local disturbances, maintained some degree of central control. He had to buy peace by concessions, and sometimes the price was high. King David of Scotland, who invaded the north immediately after Stephen's coronation, was bought off in February 1136 by the cession of Cumbria. The border was restored to its old place on the Rere Cross, to the bitter resentment of Ranulf, earl of Chester, who had claims in Cumbria.⁸⁷ But the alliance was precarious; there was no guarantee that David would not strike a blow for his niece Matilda, to whom he had sworn allegiance, if ever she should make a positive bid for the throne; and indeed he did so by invading again in 1138. Beaten back by the northern barons and the archbishop of York at the battle of the Standard, he still retained Cumbria, which was not recovered until the next reign.

In Wales too there were heavy losses. Revolt, which had been simmering when Henry I died, broke out openly in 1136, when the Welsh laid siege to most of the Norman castles, and burnt all they could capture. In the middle march they crossed the border into Shropshire, burnt Causs castle, and killed the sheriff, Pain fitz John. Stephen attempted to hold them back without intervening in person as he had done in Scotland, by using magnates with local interests to resist the rebels. This was not enough. Richard fitz Gilbert was killed in an ambush and his wife was besieged in Cardigan castle. Miles, castellan and sheriff of Gloucester and royal constable, who was sent to rescue her did so in one swift raid but attempted no more. Baldwin fitz Gilbert could penetrate no further than Brecon. Only the castellan of Pembroke Castle, which could be supplied by sea, held out and preserved some authority in the surrounding district. Elsewhere lands in the hard-won Welsh march were lost, and lands in Shropshire and Herefordshire were exposed to pillage. More seriously, some of the border barons formed or renewed alliances with individual Welsh princes, to whom they could look for military support should they ever decide to renounce their allegiance and rebel openly.⁸⁸ The Anglo-Norman realm, after two generations of expansion, was forced to contract, so adding disinherited vassals to the ranks of those whose ambitions were still unfulfilled. Stephen could hold their allegiance only by granting financial exemptions or parts of the royal demesne, or by creating offices for them. He was still able to put down any local rebellions but, as William of Malmesbury commented, 'always' with more loss to himself than to his opponents, for after expending many great efforts in vain he would win a pretence of peace from them for a time by the gift of honours or castles. Finally he also established many as earls who had not been earls before.⁸⁹

Henry I had created only two new earls in his lifetime, and had allowed two earldoms to lapse; between 1136 and 1140 Stephen created more than a dozen. His gifts included the grant of Northampton to Simon of Senlis, Bedford to Hugh of Beaumont, York to William of Aumale, Derby and Nottingham to Robert of Ferrers, Pembroke to Gilbert fitz Gilbert and Hertford to his cousin, Gilbert fitz Richard, Worcester to Waleran of Meulan, Lincoln (later Sussex) to William of Aubigny and Cambridge (later Lincoln) to William of Roumare. These new earldoms,

Hampshire, England, and Virginia

Andrew Reade, grandfather of George Reade of Virginia, owned the manor of Facombe in Hampshire, England, in 1579. The parish of Facombe contains 2669 acres and is situated in the extreme north of Hampshire, seven miles north-west from Hursbourne station on the London and South Western Railway, 8½ miles north east of Andover. The village contains about 750 persons. The Reade arms were "azure guttee d' or a cross crosslet fitchee of the last. Crest: A shoveller close sable". Andrew Reade bought two-thirds of the Manor of Facombe, Sundry, from Robert Knight in 1579. Agnes, widow of William Sundry, who held the other one-third, held a court there with Andrew, Henry, Richard and Robert Reade the 13th of April 1579. Arthur Sundry, her son, sold the other third to Andrew Reade in 1585 for 1100s (Victoria History, Hampshire, Vol. IV, p. 316). In 1573 William Sandys rented the manor of Facombe Upstreete or Facombe Sandys, to Hercules Ameredeth for 99 years for a yearly rental of 13 £, 14 S and this was transferred by the latter to Andrew Reade in 1577. In 1600 William Lord Sandys granted Thomas Bilson, Bishop of Winchester, a further lease of 70 years, beginning at the expiration of the first lease and this lease was made over to Andrew Reade in 1610 by the Bishop (Do. P. 317).

A fairly complete and interesting series of Court Rolls of the two manors from 1371 to 1633 exists at the British Museum (Add R 4894-5078). From the Court Rolls it also appears that the chief manor was often called Facombe Netherton from its position while Facombe Upstreet is the name usually given to the second manor. There was a good deal of jealousy between the farmers of these two manors and it was repeatedly laid down that the lords of both had equal right to pasture for their animals on Challdown. (Do. p. 317)

Andrew Reade married, first, Alice Cooke of Kent. She was buried at Facombe March 6, 1605. He evidently married, secondly, Elizabeth -----, who was buried May 22, 1609. He made his will 16 October 1621 and same was probated the 24th of Oct., 1623. (PCC 100 Swan) (See will V. M.)

Children of Andrew Reade.

I.

HENRY, b. 1566, m. Anne Windebanke, dau. of Sir Thomas as Windebanks of Haines Hall, Berks. at St. Martins in the Fields, London, September 3, 1592. He married, secondly, at Facombe, Anne Poynter, Sept. 24, 1628.

He matriculated at Lincoln College, Oxford, 30 Oct. 1584, aged 18. B.A. 13 June ----- Barrister at Law, Middle Temple 1596 (as son and heir of Andrew of Facombe Hants, (gent)). He was probably M.P. Andover 1598-9 (Foster's Oxford Alumni).

Anne Reade was buried June 8, 1624, in the Facombe Church. This church became ruinous and the new Church of St. Barnabas at Facombe, built in 1866, has several monuments transferred from the old church. On the west wall of the nave is a brass, set in a marble frame to Anne Reade. Over the inscription are the kneeling figures of the lady, her two sons and three daughters. On the south wall adjacent is a marble tablet with an inscription to Henry Reade who died April 4, 1647. Her inscription is as follows:

"Here lyes the body of Anne Reade, ye deare wife of Henry Reade, Esqr. one of ye daughters of Sr. Tho. Windebanke, Kt. Clerk of the Signet to the late Queen Elizabeth and to K. James that now is. She was begotten of ye body of Frances Dymock, his wife, one of ye daughters of Sir. Edward Dymock of Skeersby in ye county of Lincolne, Kt. Champion to ye said Queen Elizabeth and her successors by tenure of his lands. She departed this world to rest with her Saviour at ye 7th day of June 1624 in ye 53 year of her age, and left behind her issues of her body living 2 sons Francis and Robert, 3 daughters Margaret, Mildred and Ann".

Henry Reades inscription is in Latin

Children: (See Parish Register Records, fourth par.) post).

1. FRANCIS, b. 2 Aug. 1609; m. Frances -----, Francis inherited the manor of Faccombe, from his father and sold it in 1655 to Sir Richard Lucy. In 1660 Frances Reade, his widow, and Edward and George Reade made over the remainder of a 99 year lease to Sir Richard Lucy (Vic. Hist. Vol. IV, p. 317) (For children see fifth par. of parish Register Records).

ROBERT, second son of Andrew, had two wives. He married Alice, daughter and heir of Francis Pooley, 10 April 1588. She died the 12th of Oct. 1598, and there is an inscription to her memory on a brass plate in the church of St. Barnabas, as follows:

"Here lyeth inclosed th body of Mrs. Alice Reade, wife unto Robert Reade of Linkenholt, gent. being daughter and sole Heyre unto Francis Pooley, Esq.

She departed this life ye 12th day of October A. 1598".

Her children, except Andrew, to the number of six are shown in the Faccombe Register first paragraph (See later).

1. ANDREW, b. 1596. of Southants, gent. entered Balliol College, 6 July 1613, aged 17. B.A. Trinity College, 26 June 1616. M.A. 28th March 1620. B.D. 17th Dec. 1629. License to Preach 1631, D.D. 7th July 1638, rector How Copple Co. Hereford 1635 and of Ludgershall Wilts. 1642 (Foster's Oxford Alumni).

Robert Reade married again the 31 of July 1600 at St. Martins in Fields, London, Mildred Windebanke, daughter of Sir Thomas Windebanke and sister of Anne Windebanke, wife of older brother Henry.

In 1600 Andrew Reade settled the manor of Linkenholt, Hants. on his son Robert. Robert Reade made his will the 10th of Dec. 1626 and died soon afterwards in 1627. Andrew, his eldest son and heir, sold the manor of Linkenholt in 1629 to Emanuel Badd for 2000 £. Robert's wife made her will 6th day of August 1630 and same was probated at Winchester that year.

Her children were: (Dates from Linkenholt Register)

1. WILLIAM, bap. 25th July 1601, was living in 1630.
2. MILDRED, bap. 3rd July 1603, died 8 Nov. 1608.
3. THOMAS, royalist, was born at Linkenholt, Hampshire, according to D.N.B. Vol. 6, p. 796, in 1606 (according to Parish Register he was baptised 18 Oct. 1604); was second son of Robert Reade of Linkenholt, by his second wife, Mildred, sister of Sir Francis Windebanke. He entered Winchester College as a scholar 1617 (Kirby Winchester Scholars, p. 168).

Through the influence of his uncle Windebanke, and afterward Sec. of State, he was appointed on 29 Jan. 1620, Latin Sec. to the Crown for life (S.P. Dom. 1619-23, P. 8) and in 1624 at the King's request, a scholarship at New College was bestowed on him. He was elected a fellow in 1626, but made no serious effort to study which caused both his uncle and the warden of the college some disquietude (Do 1627-8, P. 473, 1631-3 P. 549). Upon the death of his mother, in 1630, and the receipt of his inheritance he applied himself to law and graduated B.C.L. 11th Oct. 1631, D.C.L. 1638 . When the Civil War broke out, Reade enlisted at Oxford as a Royalist under Capt. William Holland, son of Thomas Holland, the regius professor of divinity at Oxford with about 100 other university men he left Oxford Sept. 6 to serve as volunteer with Sir John Byron's Troop. At Chipping Norton they were waylaid by a troop of horse under John Fiennes, son of Lord Saye and Sele, but Reade escaped to Worcester.

Reade returned to Oxford before 1643 and was admitted, by the King's mandate of 16 Oct. 1643, principal of Magdalen Hall. When Oxford surrendered to Parliament in 1646, Reade was ordered by the committee of both houses of parliament 7 July 1648 to bring his papers and writings before them (S.P. Dom. 1648-9, P. 170).

He fled abroad and soon afterwards was ordained a Catholic Priest at Douay 6 March 1649. He wrote in defense of Romanism a reply to Edward Boughern, "account of the Church Catholic, London, 1653". His work was printed in Paris 1659.

After the Restoration Reade returned to London, was admitted into the College of advocates 8 May 1661, was allowed to live in Doctor's Common, and was appointed surrogate to Sir Wm. Meyrick, Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury.

He died in poverty at Exeter House, Strand, early in March 1669, to which, after the great fire, Doctors Common had been removed (Dict. National Biography, Vol. 16, P. 796).

Thomas Reade's will was as follows: (P.C.C. 76, Coke 1669) dated, March 7, 1668, administration being granted the following year to Christopher Windebanke, his cousin. (nuncupative) He says he had a half brother living at Ludgershall, Wiltshire, not far from Andover. This was Andrew, rector of Ludgershall.

4. ALICE, bap. 11 May 1607, m. Thomas Farwell, of Somerset, 1st April 1630.

5. GEORGE, not shown in parish register but is mentioned in will of his grandfather, Andrew, and of his mother,

Mildred. He came to Virginia about 1637. (See later)
6. ROBERT, bap. 20 July 1609, was private secretary to his uncle, Sir Francis Windebanke, Secretary of State to Charles I. He corresponded with his younger brother George, in Virginia, and in the account of George's life we show a letter from George written to him from Virginia, Feb. 26, 1637-8. In March 1641 Robert was in Paris, probably having fled abroad with Windebanke to escape prosecution by Parliament.

Oct. 2, 1660 Robert wrote Sec. of State Nicholas and reproaches him for having made no attempt to recover for him the situation of Clerk of the Signet, granted him by the late King and for putting his own son in the place instead. (S. P. Dom. 1660, p. 304).

Dec. 1660, one Sidney Bere, holding a patent of 1641, for the reversion of the Clerkship of the signet, requests that if Sir Thomas Windebanks and Robert Reade, the precedent reversors now Romanist and beyond seas do now return and take the oath of supremacy and allegiance, that he may be admitted to the office (S. P. Dom. 1660, p. 445).

7. Francis, bap. 30 May 1613.

(From "State Papers, Domestic, Charles I")

Francis Reade wrote as follows to his first cousin Robert Reade, son of his uncle Robert, Facombe, Sept. 8, 1640 (P. 26) Francis Reade to his cousin Robert Reade at Lennox House in Drury-Lane. Thanks for his letter. The falseness or malice of report had made the conquest of the rebels and the loss of our party so eminently great it could not but comfort any well affected to find the loss no greater nor more unequal than by yours. I preserve it as, yet any loss in this kind is extremely considerable and pity is, he has a heart that feels not some motives and desires to revenge the death of our countrymen and these affronts to his majesty by those contemptible rebels. I trust to God that, however the pressed troops did, the trained bands well show they have loyal and valiant hearts by their cheerful defence of their King and country. (Promises to write more fully next week)

Facombe Oct. 4, 1640 (P. 139)

Francis Read to Robert Read. Thanks for his letter. The news of Parliament is most acceptably welcome. xxx My Fancy to procure a place there for myself is soon cooled upon consideration besides the difficulties I should meet with of a greater charge in preparing myself than I am but to bear and of a longer absence than my occasions here would find convenient. But if I can by any good hap or endeavor get a place in my power assure yourself you are master thereof.

(P. 179) Oct. 18, 1680 From Facombe.

Francis Read to his cousin Robert Read. I crave pardon for last week's omission and am hopeful I shall obtain it when you of my dear neighbor Lady Rainsford. at my return I found yours of last, and am welcomed home by yours of this week, for which am their predecessors I acknowledge myself infinitely bound to your favors. The carriage of the rebels in this business of the treaty will, I doubt not, at last made it clear to those who have proceedings of what spirit they are and how true their former pretence of religion etc. were. And I conceive it to be a happy thing that this discovery will be made both by and to those Lords who perhaps did stand affected to their cause.

..... Sir Thomas Jervoyse hath at last engrossed both the burges places of Whitchurch (Hants), that town being. I know not why, so much at his command that they dare not deny him. Had he been contented with one I had a promise of the other for myself or friend; but through his Power there and my loathness to contest with him. I must let it alone. My wife's expectation of being confined about a fortnight hence will keep me from London until after that time; and that being by God's mercy

HOUSE OF PERCY

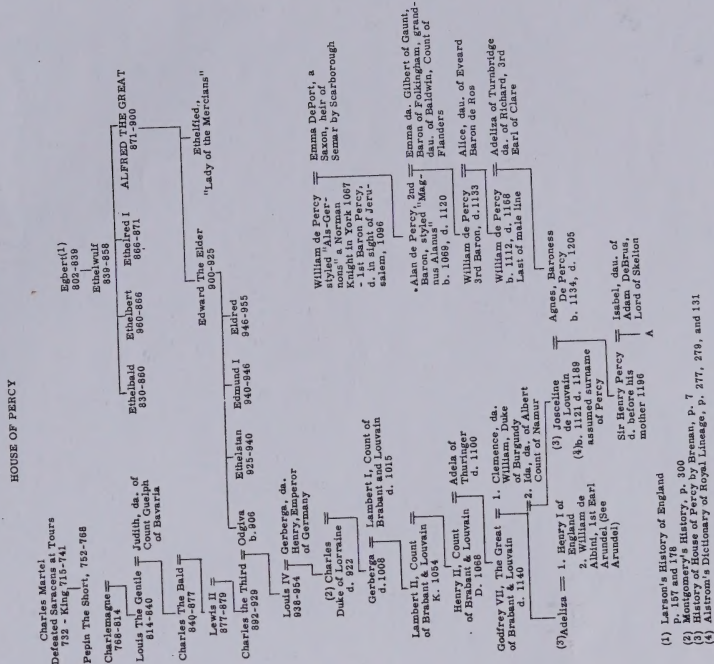

Thomas Webb to Robert Reade Sept. 30, 1640 (p. 121)

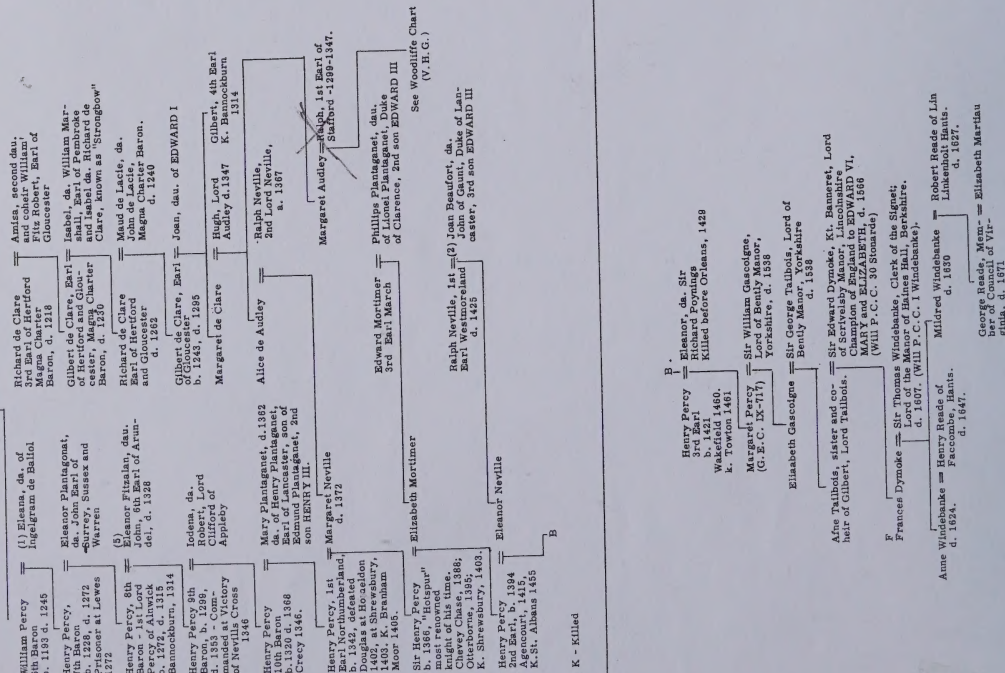

Thomas Webb to Robert Reade Sept. 30, 1640 (p. 121)

I am sorry I received yours of the 28th not sooner for before it came my Lord had been, as you suppose infinitely importuned for places in this next Parliament, and merely to avoid more he commanded me to write his letters xxx that they might be answers to all other suitors, and this was dispatched this morning before he went to Hull with the King, so that you will take a plain truth for a fair excuse thus stands the case; my Lord has written to every corporate town for one and I know not whether his Power will extend to more, xxx or if you have a mind to Whitechurch or any other place in Hampshire yet free, and with a letter of ours and Lord Cottington's will speed anywhere. This is the best service we can do you at present.

(p. 291) Dec. 1, 1640, Richard Johnson, Keeper of Newgate, to Robert Read, I was questioned by the House of Commons, how and why xxx certain priests were committed to Newgate and by whose warrant they were discharged. I answered that I never had in my custody and of the warrants only I found an entry in a book that they were delivered by warrant from Sir Francis Windebanke, Principal Secretary of State.
(State Papers Domestic, Charles I, p. 299, 1640-41)
Calais, Dec. 6, 1640, Robert Read to his cousin Thos. Windebanke.

Thursday night last (Dec. 3) I wrote you from Queensborough where we lay on board all night. In the morning early we put forth, from an extreme calm we got no further than Margate Roads that night. Saturday morning we were very leisurely conveyed to Deal where the ship anchored. Finding her very unfit because so unwieldy in this calm, we got a little cockboat of Deal to wait us hither xxx Mr. Sec. Windebank has passed very well, having been sick only one hour last night at sea. But of other things he is most sensible. If possible we shall go towards Paris tomorrow. We shall be extremely glad to hear what is likely to be the proceedings concerning him, and though my own particular in this time be of the least consideration you will oblige me to let me know of anything that may reflect upon my bank.

GEORGE READE, son of Mildred (Windebanke) and Robert Reade of Linkeholme in Hampshire, first appears in the Virginia records about 1637. It seems that when he came to Virginia he lodged with Governor Harvey.

George Reade's brother, Robert Reade, as shown before, was secretary to Secretary of State, Sir Francis Windbanke, and one of George Reade's letters to his brother, Robert, appears in the Colonial Papers of England, as follows: Col. Papers. Vol. 9 #86 (abstract):

James City. Feb. 26, 1637-8

To his brother Robert Reade, Secretary to Secretary of State, Sir Francis Windebank. Mr. Hawley hath not approved himself the man that he believes his brother took him for, for the writer has not as yet received any satisfaction for the money Hawley received of Robert Reade. Hawley brought in no men with him or else he carried them for want of his servants last year, and it not been for the Maryland where he now is. Has sustained a great loss for Governor and Sec. Kemp does not know how he should have subsisted in the County all this while. Mr. Menefie is come in a ship now in the river who hath brought a great many servants. Has received many particular favors from Sec. Kemp which the writer hopes his brother will take notice of in his letters."

It will be noted that in George Read's letter he stated that he had received many particular favors from Sec. Kemp of Virginia. Secretary Kemp desired to return to England temporarily and wrote to Robert Read from James City, 20th March 1637 as follows: (S. P. Col. Vol. 10 #60)

ys: (S.P. Col. Vol. 10 #60)
 "My desire of keeping the place (if it may stand with the effecting going home) hath (among other too long heere to repeat) this reason I would in my absence depute your Brother in my place, with helps sufficient for execution thereof; I have already stated upon him the profit of the warrant and orders of Court, an employment will be none of the least of his benefits."

of the least of his benefits.
Hawley, who was mentioned in Robert Read's letter was Jerome Hawley who was appointed Treasurer for Virginia on May 8, 1638 (W. M. 10, P. 424).
Under date of May 17, 1638, Jerome Hawley wrote to Robert Read in England, as follows: (Col. Papers, Vol. 9, P. 110)
(abstract)

"Explains how things stand between himself and Read's brother, the question of accounts between them and his brother's affairs in the colony, which were referred to Mr. Kemp 'to end the business'."

Ever since his brother's arrival he hath lived in the house with the Governor, who takes that care of him that he can want for nothing. At Christmas last he had command of some forces sent upon a new plantation, but the design took not effect through the extremity of the weather. Will not fail to do him all the service he is able.

Disputes between himself and Mr. Kemp touching pre-cedency, his grudge against Hawley for taking from him the fee of 2 d. per hoghead for taking the account of tobacco sent home, and hears Kemp uses some endeavour in England to get the same again out of Hawley's hands". Secretary Kemp of Virginia went to England in 1640 and George Reade was appointed Deputy Secretary of State in his place, for he signed the House of Burgess Reports as Secretary in 1642. (9V69)

Col. George Reade was Burgess for James City County in 1648 and in Dec. 1656 (Hemming I, P. 356, 421). He became a member of the Governor's Council on March 13, 1657-58, which office he held until his death in 1671 (Hemming I, P. 438, 505).

The will of Col. George Reade was admitted to Probate in the General Court on the oath of his kinsman, Mr. Thos. Reade and Henry Richardson (W & M 12, p. 65) but his will perished in the destruction of the General Court records in Richmond during the Civil War.

Col. George Reade married Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. Nicholas Martiau, who was the first to patent land on the site of Yorktown. Capt. Martiau represented York in the House of Burgess in 1632. For a more complete record one should read "Nicholas Martiau" by ----- Mrs. Elizabeth Reade made her will the 10th day of Feb. 1685-6 and same was proved 24th Jan. 1686-7.

Children:

I. GEORGE, mentioned as deceased in his mother's will 1686-7.

II. ELIZABETH, married Captain Thomas Chisman, who made his will in York 1715. He was a son of Edmund Chisman whose will was probated 1678. (See later)

MILDRED, m. Col. Augustine Warner, speaker of the House of Burgess, b. June 3, 1642, d. June 19, 1681. He was the son of Col. Augustine Warner of "Warner Hall," b. Nov. 28, 1610, d. December 26, 1674, aged 63 years, 2 months, 26 days. (Eptaph at Warner Hall)

Col. Augustine Warner entered the Merchant Taylor's School, London, aged 11, 1653. Mildred (Reade) Warner made her will in Gloucester January 4, 1694 (Records destroyed). They had two children who died in infancy. The surviving children were:

1. Mildred Warner, m. 1690 Lawrence Washington. Their son Augustine was the father of President George Washington.

2. Mary, m. February 17, 1680, John Smith of Purton. She is an ancestress of the present Queen of England, through her daughter Mildred Smith, as follows:

a. Mildred Smith, b. 1682, m. 1700 Robert Porteus of Newbottle, Virginia, 1679-1758.

b. Rev. Robert Porteus, 1705-1754, Rector of Cockayne Hatley, co. Bedford, m. 1738 Judith Cockayne, 1702-1789.

c. Mildred Porteus, b. 1744, m. Robert Hodgson of Congleton, co. Chester, b. 1740.

d. Rev. Robert Hodgson, Dean of Carlisle, m. 1804 Mary Tucker.

e. Henrietta Mildred Hodgson m. 1824 Oswald Smith, 1794-1863, of Blendon Hall, co. Kent.

f. Frances Dora Smith, d. 1922, m. 1853 Claude Lyon-Bowes, later Bowes-Lyon, 13th Earl of Strathmore, 1824-1904.

g. Claude George Bowes-Lyon, 14th Earl of Strathmore, K.G., K.T., b. 1855, m. 1881 Nina Cecilia Cavendish-Bentnck, d. 1938.

h. ELIZABETH ANGELA MARGUERITE, Her Majesty the Queen, b. 1900, m. 1923 His Majesty King George VI, b. 1895, succeeded 1936.

H.R.H. Princess Elizabeth, b. 1926, now

QUEEN ELIZABETH II.

H.R.H. Princess Margaret Rose, b. 1930.

3. Elizabeth, m. November 24, 1672, Col. John Lewis of Warner Hall, M.C. 1715. He was born November 30, 1667, died November 4, 1725. Elizabeth died February 16, 1720. They were the parents of Elizabeth Lewis who married Col. John Bollings of "Cobbs," Chesterfield, born Jan. 20, 1700, died September 6, 1757. (See Bolling)

IV. ROBERT, m. Mary Lilly, dau. of John Lilly, a Justice of York 1692. (See deed 1688). John Lilly's wife was heiress of Edward Malhison (See deed 1693).

Robert Reade patented 350 acres in York in 1684 and 305 in 1688, also 350 in Warwick 1684. (Book 7, p. 353 & p. 680). He was a Burgess in 1688 (15 V. 322) and a Justice in 1697. His will was probated in York March 16, 1712. (Bk. 14-241)

Children:

1. JOHN, was willed land called "Tower Hill" in King and Queen County by Benjamin Reade in 1692 who called him his nephew (Cousin). This land was to go to him after the death of George, son of Thomas Reade and Robert, son of Robert Reade. John may have died in King & Queen where the records are destroyed.

He may have had the following children seemingly not connected with any other family.

- (1) JOHN, m. Sarah ----- and died some time before Jan. 11, 1756 as his widow married Hinde Russell, on that day. She was born March 7, 1732 and died Mar. 18, 1800 (W & M II, p. 264).
Children of Sarah and John Reade:
 - (a) ELIZABETH, b. July 4, 1751, died March 4, 1777. Elizabeth Reade, daughter of John Reade of York attended school 1757-1767 (W & M 6 p. 3). She was the first wife of Col. Edward Harwood of Warwick.
Edward Harwood and Elizabeth his wife of Warwick, Hinde Russell and Sarah his wife of the same county, deed to Thomas Nelson 400 acres lying on York River, near Yorktown, on land of said Nelson; the said tract, by the will of George Reade recorded in the General Court November 1, 1671 was devised to his son Robert Reade, the same descended to his son John Reade, decd., to the and from the said John Reade the same descended to his son John Reade late husband of the said Sarah and father to the said Elizabeth, parties to these presents, and from him to the said Elizabeth subject to the dower of the said Sarah.
Signed: Edward Harwood, Elizabeth Harwood; Hinde Russell, Sarah Russell (Bk. 8, 1769-1777-p. 449, dated Dec. 7, 1773)
- (2) ELIZABETH, m. February 9, 1741, Aaron Phillips (See W & M 13, p. 66 and note 4, same issue, for Phillips Bible record)
- (3) MILDRED, who made her will in 1775 and left legacies to nephew William Phillips and niece Anne Phillips.
2. MARGARET, m. Thomas Nelson.
3. THOMAS, d.s.p., made his will in York 1719 and mentions mother Mary and brothers John, George, Francis and Samuel, Sister Margaret Nelson and Mildred Goodwin (W & M 14, p. 119).
4. GEORGE, is mentioned in will of Bro. Thomas 1719 but is not mentioned in will of his mother 1722; probably died unmarried.
5. MILDRED, m. (1) James Goodwyn (no issue) (2) Col. Lawrence Smith.
6. SAMUEL, m. Mary Schlater, b. March 9, 1712, daughter of Richard Schlater who m. Mary, daughter of Capt. Nutting and his wife Elizabeth Booth (W. & M. 14, p. 120). Samuel Reade lived in Hampton Parish, York County. (Burgess: Va. Soldiers, Vol. 1, p. 262) He made a petition for his wife's share of the estate of Richard Schlater, now in the hands of Robert Armistead who married the widow of Wm. Schlater.

- Samuel Reade's will was probated 20, November 1758 (Book 20, p. 505), and names wife Mary who died February 7, 1773. Her will was probated March 15, 1773. (W. B. 20-505)
Children of Samuel and Mary (Schlater) Reade:
- (1) FRANCES was given in her father's will "land in York where I now live." She married December 1, 1757, Major Anthony Robinson and died August 26, 1762.
 - (2) MILDRED was given "all that tract of land in St. Stephens Parish" (Tower Hill), King & Queen in her father's will. She may be the Mildred Reade who made her will in 1775.
 - (3) MARY, m. John Cary. Among the 9 negroes Samuel Reade left his daughter, Mary Cary, one was named "Quash". In the settlement of the estate of Samuel Reade the following payments were made: (W. B. 22-p. 476) To John Cary, agreeable to will L 8-19-0
Edward Cary, Jr. L 83-17-4
Samuel Cary L 83-17-4
- John Cary's will was probated in York, 1763, (now torn). He mentions sons Edward and Samuel; and leaves Samuel a negro named "Quash", but names wife "Susanna" evidently a second wife.
- (4) JOHN, son of Samuel died December 26, 1746.
 7. FRANCES, mentioned in will of his brother Thomas Reade, 1719, and in his mother's will in 1722. (Untraced)
 8. ROBERT, left land called "Tower Hill" in King and Queen in will of Benjamin Reade, 1692-3, jointly with George, son of Thomas Reade. He is not mentioned in his brother Thomas Reade's will in 1719, or his mother's will of 1722. Probably died unmarried.
- V. THOMAS, son of Mary and Col. George Reade, m. Lucy Gwynn, daughter of Edmund Gwynn and Lucy Bernard (V. M. 4, P. 206). She was daughter of Col. William Bernard and Lucy (Higginson) Burwell, widow of Col. Lewis Burwell of Carters Creek, Gloucester, and daughter of Capt. Robert Higginson.
Col. William Bernard was the son of Francis Bernard of Kingsthorpe, Northamptonshire, and a brother of Sir Robert Bernard, Bart. of Brampton, Huntingdonshire (V. M. 25, P. 87 and 88).
Thomas Reade was under age when his mother made her will 10th Feb. 1685-6 so he could not have been the Thomas Reade who was denounced by Bacon in his proclamation in 1676, as stated by some historians.
Thomas Reade had 2000 acres in Petsworth Parish, Gloucester County, and 400 acres in Ware Parish in the same county in 1704. He was evidently a Captain in the militia for 396 acres were surveyed for Capt. Thomas Reade in Gloucester, Petsworth Parish, 10 Mar. 1734 beginning at Mr. Edward Wiatts line, bounded by Major John

Historical Sketch of the Parish

Washington and the land of Gwynn Reade, Thomas Reade and John Reade (Gloucester Plat Book, W. M. 10, P. 142) Thomas Reade of Gloucester, April 6, 1695, sold to Robert Reade of York, "5 acres of land in York, being part of a dividend lately bought from my brother Benjamin Reade and sold by me to my sister Mildred Warner" (D. B. 1694-1701 #1). His previous sale to Mildred Warner was dated May 22, 1694, and signed by wife, Lucy. His brother Benjamin also had a wife named "Lucy".

The Gloucester County records are destroyed and the only authentic record of his children is shown in an act to dock entail of 550 acres of land in Gloucester (Henning Statutes, Vol. VIII, p. 488).

Children:

1. THOMAS, b. 1697, d. 8 April 1739, without issue.
2. JOHN, m. Frances Yates, Feb. 2, 1737 (Middlesex Parish Register, P. 170). He was ordained a minister in England and returned to Virginia in 1734 when he was appointed minister for Middlesex Parish. He is said to have been Rector of Stratton Major Parish in King and Queen Co. from 1736 to 1743. In Henning Statutes he is mentioned as Clerk of King and Queen.

The Rev. John Reade was dead in 1748 for on March 4th of that year a petition of Phillip Rootes, Bartholomew Yates and Robert Yates, executors of the last will and testament of the Rev. John Reade prayed for compensation because a runaway slave belonging to his estate lost his feet through same being frozen while confined in jail. (Journals House of Burgess 1748, p. 331).

Children:

- (1) JOHN, b. June 19, 1744, died in infancy.
- (2) Sarah, m. John Rootes.
3. LUCY, b. 1701, d. 1731, m. John Dixon of Bristol (W&M 3, P. 29)
4. JOYCE, b. 1702-3, d. 1771, m. Christopher Tompkins of Carolina (V. M. 19, p. 196). She may have been a daughter of Benjamin Reade.
5. MILDRED, m. Phillip Rootes of Rosewall in King and Queen (V. M. 4, p. 204).
6. MARY, m. Mordecai Throckmorton (W&M 3, p. 50 and 14, p. 117).
7. ANNE, m. Matthew Pate of Gloucester (W&M 14, P. 117)

VI.

FRANCIS, son of Colonel George Reade, was not of age when his mother, Elizabeth, made her will 10 Feb. 1685-6. He was probably of age on Nov. 12, 1688, when he and his brothers, Robert and Benjamin, divided land of their father in York County. His first wife was Jane, daughter of Edward Chisman, whose will was probated in York in 1673 (14 W. (1) 124). His second wife was Anne, granddaughter of Alice Beale, widow of Col. Thomas Beale, Councillor, who made her will in York, October 9, 1700, and mentions her great-grandsons, Thomas and Benjamin

John Bennett & Appleton

Reade, sons of Francis Reade (See Beale).

Colonel George Reade by will left 850 acres in Yorktown to be divided as follows: $\frac{1}{2}$ to Robert Reade, $\frac{1}{4}$ to Benjamin Reade, $\frac{1}{4}$ to Francis Reade (T 256). This division was made in 1688.

On May 25, 1693, Francis Reade of York sold to John Doswell, 150 acres, called "Yorke Ridge", xx said land being granted to Edmond Chisman by patent dated Oct. 17, 1662, who by will gave it to daughter Jane, who married me, Francis Reade". Deed was signed "Anne Reade". Jane was probably deceased. (For patent see C. P. 464)

Benjamin Reade, in his will, 1692, gave a tract of land called "Tower Hill" in King and Queen to his two "nephews" (cousins) George, son of Francis Reade, and Robert, son of Robert Reade, both of York County, to be divided equally between the two "nephews" when they come of age. If they were to die in their minority without issue, tract was to go to John Reade, son of Robert Reade, son of Francis, and his cousin Robert, son of George, son of Francis, and Robert, son of Robert Reade, evidently died in their minority as the tract eventually came to John Reade, son of Robert, who sold the same to his father, Robert Reade (See Robert's will)

Benjamin also bequeathed "all the rest of his land in King and Queen unto my two kinsmen, Mr. Robert Reade and Mr. Francis Reade, to be equally divided between them, they to have and enjoy the same until their sons, George and Robert, come of age". While this clause is ambiguous it did not cover the "Tower Hill" tract patented 1658 (C. P. 358). Unless it meant that they were to enjoy the Tower Hill tract until the sons came of age, it is evidently added on as there is not any entail or further disposition of the property.

This would probably cover another 1600 tract patented by Edward Lockey, owner of "Tower Hill" January 28, 1662. (C. P. 421).

There is no record of the will or inventory of Francis Reade in York County and he evidently moved to King and Queen where he died. The Quit Rent Rolls of 1704 for that county show that one Riddle was holding 700 acres of land for Thomas Reade, evidently a minor, at that time. Also Francis' two daughters married men living in King and Queen.

Anne Beale, widow of Thomas Beale and mother of Anne Reade, second wife of Francis, married William Colston. William Colston made his will in Richmond County, 17th of October, 1701, and bequeathed a legacy to THOMAS READE when he arrives at the age of 18 (Crozier 6-229).

"Yorke Ridge" was left to Jane Chisman in her father's will 1678. She was deceased before that property was sold to Francis and his second wife, Anne, in 1693. According to custom of the time Francis probably married in 1684-85 when about seventeen or eighteen years of age.

Scrivelsby and Kyme

You will notice that the two basic lines of our Reader ancestral search lines are Dynotus and Telboys (Tottleboys of Kyme), both of which had ancestors who came with the Conqueror in 1066. Domesday Book shows that 100 Tottleboys was granted dozens of land grants from the Conqueror himself, too numerous to list here. One branch settled at Kyme (not far from) fertile lands not far SE of Linslade with mills and many fisheries easy to find on the map.

In contrast, Scrivelsby in Lincolnshire is not shown in any other recorded in modern books - just where it is in the County one cannot say, but Domesday Book says "Scrivelsby" was King's land once for by by Robert the Steward. "The lord of the manor has the right, granted by William the Conqueror, to act as Grand Champion of England, a standard bearer of inaugurations."

As shown in our Harleian Society Pedigree - Lincenshire Pedigree shows, the first time a Dynotus (Sir John) of Scrivelsby had this honour was at the coronation of Richard II in 1377 - but we learn from that the principle was through his wife Margaret Lutter who came from her mother Juanna Mornion, daughter of Phillip Mornion. Phillip's grandfather received the honour from King Henry II in 1155. Was that a case of restoring his GG Grandfather Roger de Mornion?

Good records are a good way of proving one's ancestral roots.

These are our ancestors. It would be nice to find out more about them!

Especially the Rye family - long before his ancestor, Hubert de Rye saved the life of young edward William the Conqueror (1047 AD). Later he and his sons accompanied King William to the Caput and gave them fine lands.
Hubert was slayed by them & died before 1086. The old place in Normandy was at the town of Rye near Bayeux in the "departement"

(County) of Calvados. See Ct G line 942. (Chenabain & Grant)

Gascoigne

See 107

Gascoigne William (E III Roll) born: argent, on a pale sable a loche's head erased hair erect of the front (Sergis ordinary)

NP p. 256

Gascoigne, or de Gascoigne. The name speaks for itself. William de Gascoigne and Geoffrey de G. are mentioned in England in 1109, 1110 (Herald, Art de Liberte).

In 1106 Ismenie, widow of Philip de Gascoigne, paid a fine in Selby.

(Coburn, Exempt) and Philip de Gascoigne had a suit in the same county 1154

(RH) An ancient family of this name was seated near Gotesmes, Normandy (Des Bois). Of this family Gerard de Gasconia occurs in Normandy (RH).

Welles -

Borthwick General
Army
ca

I accidentally cut off the description of the Welles etc. in the (very bottom of page 107) There were 23 different Welles groups listed! lists 6 Welles, Welles, Well etc - PERHAPS one of them.

See Philip de Wells of Lincolnshire (E II Roll) born: argent a lion rampant, tail fourched sable, a basket gold (Parliamentary Roll)

NP says WELLES - See Welles - in this case not appropriate - but shows the Welles in England 1171 or possibly before.

#10 Placetis

Norman People says

Places - armorially identified with De Plessatis, a Norman baronial family Radolatus, Gardinus, Ascuvis de Pleisuz, Plerz or Plessys in Normandy 1180.

Giles de Plagz was summoned by writ as a baron (in England) 1293 AD

Placetis v. Plessatis.

Plaice, Sir Edmond de—bore, at the first Dunstable tournament 1308, argent, a bend between six annulets 3 and 3 gules (F.); bend azure in H. 5848.

Plessatis, Hugh de, baron 1299—bore, argent, six annulets gules (F.); Nobility and other Rolls; ascribed to Sir JOHN in Glover Roll—three annulets in Norfolk Roll, under PLACETIS, PLESCY, PLESCIS, and PLESSIS.

Pleacy, Sir Henry or Hugh de, of Oxon—(E. II. Roll) bore, argent, six torteaux; Sir JOHN differenced with a label (3) azure, and his son with a baston azure; Parly. Roll.

MARMION

The family of Marmion was of Norman origin, its chief property lying at Fontenay-le-Marmion in the department of Calvados. The Lords of Fontenay-le-Marmion are said to have been hereditary champions of the Dukes of Normandy. A Robert Marmion fought at Hastings, and in 'Domesday Book' a Robert Marmion occurs as holding Tamworth Castle and Scrivelsby, together with other lands which afterwards belonged to the Marmion family. The earliest known occurrence of the name seems to be that of a William Marmion who exchanged twelve acres of land, apparently at Fontenay, with Ralf Taissou, son of Ralf the Angevin, which were granted by the latter to the abbey of Fontenay before October 1049, and who occurs in 1060 as a witness to a confirmation charter by William, Duke of Normandy.

Marmion, John, banneret, baron 1297—bore, vair, a fess gules; Nobility Roll—as also did PHILIP (F.), Sir ROBERT in Norfolk, Ashmole and Arden Rolls; and WILLIAM (4) in Dering Roll. (F.)

Marmion, Philip—(H. III. Roll) bore, vair, a fess gules fretty or. (F.) St. George and Glover Rolls.

Marmion, Sir John, Knight banneret—(H. VI. Roll)—bore, vert, a fess gules—and, added—between six lions rampant 3 and 3 argent; Arundel Roll.

Marmion, Sir William—bore, at the siege of Calais 1345-8, vair, a fess gules, a label (3) or. (F.)

Marmion, Geoffrey, of Checkendon, Bucks, bore, vair, three niascles 2 and 1 gules—Harl. MS. 1481 fo. 71.

Marmion, Sir William—bore, at the first Dunstable tournament 1308, gules, a lion rampant vair crowned or (F.); (uncrowned in Jenyns' Ordinary)—ascribed to a Suffolk Knight in Arundel Roll, and to Sir WILLIAM, of co. Leic. in Parly. Roll, though in Harl. MS. 6137 fo. 24, the field is argent and the lion vert.

Marmion, Philip—(H. III. Roll) bore, sable, a sword erect in pale, point in chief argent; Dering and Howard Rolls—point in base (F.) Camden Roll.

History of Scrimshaw
King Henry II honored Justice Rogande Marmion as hereditary carrying the banner at royal coronations of English kings, carried by Barons of Scrimshaw (which had been given to the Robert Marmion who fought at the Battle of Hastings). In the 6th generation Sir Phillip Marmion had no sons. Daughter Johanne Marmion, heiress of Scrimshaw brought the banner and coronations to her husband Sir Thomas Ludlow, but had no sons. Only child, Dame Margaret Ludlow brought Scrimshaw and the coronations to her husband Sir John Dymoke.

SCROPE

The Scrope family was seated in Yorkshire, England. They lived in the valley of the Ure River, called Wensleydale, and their burial place was St. Agatha's Abbey, at Easby, near Richmond, sometimes referred to as Easby Abbey. The name appears in early charters as Scrop (often in its Gallicised form Escrop), or Lescrop. It is suggested that it is a personal nickname of old Norse origin meaning "crab"; and that this was probably believed in the family, as later members of it bore a crab as their crest.

1. Robert de Marmion, (ca 1106),
m. Hawise,
ch. 2. Roger de Marmion,
Helto de Marmion,
Manasses de Marmion.

Robert de Marmion is probably that Robert who fought at Hastings in 1066, at the conquest of England. He died in or before 1106, when his widow, Hawise, became a nun in the abbey of Holy Trinity, Caen, granting to that house certain of her husband's lands, with the consent of her sons, Roger, Helto and Manasses.

2. Roger de Marmion, (ca 1130),
m. Unknown, dau. of Urso d'Abiot, [333-3]
ch. 3. Robert de Marmion,

✓ Roger de Marmion held Tamworth and Scrivelsby during the reign of Henry I. He was a justiciar for Henry I in Normandy.

3. Robert de Marmion, (ca 1090-ca 1143),
m. ca 1132, Milicent of Rethel,
dau. of Gervase, Count of Rethel, [143-4]
ch. 4. Robert de Marmion.

Robert de Marmion was born probably between 1090 and 1095, in Normandy. He first appears in the Lindsey Survey of Lincolnshire, 1115-1118. Robert de Marmion was a warlike man, who in the days of the anarchy under Stephen had no match for boldness, fierceness, and cunning. In 1140 Geoffrey of Anjou captured his castle of Fontenay in Normandy, because he held Falaise against him. Three years later he expelled the monks of Coventry, and made a castle of their church. Soon after, on 8 Sep 1143, he engaged in a fight with the Earl of Chester outside the walls of his strange fortress. Being thrown from his horse between the two armies, he broke his thigh, and as he lay on the ground was despatched by a cobbler with his knife. He was buried at Polesworth, Warwickshire, in unconsecrated ground as an excommunicated person. Robert de Marmion married Milicent, daughter of Gervase, Count of Rethel. It is said that his son, Robert, married Elizabeth, sister of Milicent.

- William de Marmion, [1818-5]
Mabel Marmion, m. (1) Hugh de Say, [1628-6]
m. (2) Reynold

All the land of Roger, his grandfather, and Robert, his father, was restored to Robert de Marmion by Stephen. In 1155 he obtained from Henry II a charter of free warren in Warwickshire, especially at Tamworth, as his ancestors had had it in the time of Henry I, and after 1170 he had from King Henry a charter of free warren in all his land of Lindsey. He granted Avon and Ditchampton, Wilts, and the honour of Llanstephan, county Carmarthen, which had belonged to Roger, his grandfather, to his uncle Geoffrey, in exchange for the latter's right in Winterringham and Scrivelsby, county Lincoln, and in the fee of Manasser Marmion. He granted the church of Checkenden, county Oxford, to Coventry Priory, about 1170-75, in satisfaction of the injuries done to that house by his father. About 1175-80 he granted a third part of Checkenden to Geoffrey Marmion, his grandson, who subsequently granted it to his brother, William. He began the foundation of Barbery Abbey in Normandy.

Robert de Marmion was Lord of Fontney, in Normandy, where he possessed a fortified castle, which was besieged by Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, and demolished. Robert was an enemy of the Earl of Chester, who had a noble seat at Coventry. Robert entered the priory there and expelled the monks, turning it into a fortification. At the same time he dug deep ditches in the adjacent fields and covered them over with earth, to secure the approaches to the priory. The Earl of Chester drew near, and as Marmion rode out to meet them, he fell into one of those ditches and broke his thigh. A common soldier seized him and cut off his head. His death occurred in or before October 1181.

Robert de Marmion is said to have married Elizabeth, daughter of Gervase, Count of Rethel, and sister of Milicent, who married Robert's father. There is some evidence to suggest that Elizabeth was married by her stepfather to Robert Marmion, away from her own country, in order to disinherit her. No undisputed proof of this has been found.

first as a Justiciar at Caen in 1177. He acted as a justice in the King's court or as itinerant in several counties in England between the years 1184 and 1205. He was sheriff of county Worcester between 1185 and 1189. Marmion had taken the vow for the crusade, but purchased exemption. In 1195 he was with Richard in Normandy, and in 1197 witnessed the treaty between Richard and Baldwin of Flanders. During the early years of John's reign he was in attendance on the King in Normandy. He sided with the barons against the King, but after John's death rejoined the royal party. He gave a mill at Barton, Warwickshire, to the Templars, and was a benefactor of Kyrstead Abbey, Lincolnshire. Robert de Marmion was dead by 15 May 1218, probably in 1217. He married first Maud (or Matilda) de Beauchamp. He married second, Philippe, whose parentage is unknown.

6. Robert de Marmion, (c. 1241),
m. Avice de Tanfield, dau. of Gernegan de Tanfield.

ch. 7. William de Marmion, Roger de Marmion.

Robert de Marmion, the younger, in 1218 paid the King for having the custody of the castle of Tamworth and the lands of which Robert his father had died seised, to hold until Robert the elder, his brother, should make his peace with the King and recover his father's lands in England, in which event he was to retain the vill of Winteringham and Coningsby, county Lincoln, Quinton, county Gloucester, and Berwick, Sussex. On the following day William de Harcourt was ordered to deliver the castle of Tamworth to him, but in 1220 it was restored to Robert the elder.

As early as 1156 the Pope had confirmed to the abbot and brethren of Mont St. Michel in Normandy, the vill called Wath with the church. Disputes arose, and in 1176-77 Gernegan, son of Hugh (ancestor of Avice de Marmion), claimed the land against the monks. In 1235 the Abbot of St. Michael quitclaimed to Robert de Marmion and Avice his wife land in Wath in the North Riding of Yorkshire, they giving 40 marks of silver. The settlement of 1235 was not the end of the matter. For in 1239 the Archbishop of York received a papal mandate to make enquiry and remit a full report on the petition of the abbot and convent of Mont St. Michel. Robert Marmion, knight, claimed the manor in right of his wife, and the abbot was summoned before the King's court, where Marmion offered to prove by duel that the manor was his. The abbot, although he had other defense, indiscreetly accepted the challenge. The combatants fought in a place appointed by the King. The knight brought a multitude of armed men, and the knight's champion was more than once brought to the ground, but the knight's party interfered to rescue him, and threatened death to the abbot and his champion. The abbot, fearing that death would ensue, came to the spot and renounced his right. The knight would not admit the renunciation, except on payment of a sum of money.

Robert de Marmion married Avice, daughter of Gernegan, who was son of Hugh de Tanfield, through whom he obtained Tanfield and several other manors of the Richmond fee. He paid 350 marks and 5 palfreys to marry Avice, who had been committed to Robert de Marmion's custody. Avice was still under age in 1221. Robert died probably in 1241. His widow was living in 1287.

7. William de Marmion, (c. 1275),

m. 1248, Lorette of Dover, dau. of Richard Fitz Roy, [562-2]
ch. 8. John de Marmion.

William de Marmion, in 1243, was under age and in the custody of William de Cantelou. In January 1252 he was granted respite from knighthood until February 1253, and then until the knighthood of Prince Edward. In 1259 he was among those who crossed with the King for service in France. He took the side of the barons against Henry III. As a supporter of Simon de Montfort he was summoned to parliament in 1264. He is described as having been a rebel in an inquisition in 1265. Between January and October 1266 safe conducts were issued for William de Marmion coming to the King's court, to stand his trial, and make his peace. He was among the disinherited who were admitted into the King's peace in July 1267 and pardoned for their trespasses during the late disturbance. William de Marmion married, before Whitsuntide 1248, Lorette, daughter of Richard Fitz Roy, who was an illegitimate son of John, King of England. Her mother was Rohese of Dover. By this marriage Marmion acquired land in Northants and county Lincoln which had been held by the Dover family. He died 27 July 1275. Lorette was dead by 1276.

8. John de Marmion, (c. 1322),

m. Isabel de Peck, dau. of Alexander de Peck,
ch. 9. John de Marmion.

John de Marmion was summoned for military service from 1291 until his death in 1322. He was summoned for parliament from 1297 to 1322. In 1298 he, as Lord of Tanfield, agreed with Fountains Abbey to abide by the charter of Avice, his grandmother, with respect to the property held of him by the monks in Melmerby. In 1314 John de Marmion and his father, and others were the subject of complaint by the Abbot of Fountains for various trespasses and assaults. These included felling trees, carrying off cattle, and plucking out the beards of certain lay brethren and servants of the abbot. He was ordered to abstain from attending Thomas, Earl of Lancaster's, meeting of 'good peers' at Doncaster in November 1321, and to appear with his forces at Coventry in February 1322 for the purpose of marching against the Earl's adherents. John de Marmion married Isabel, said to be a daughter of Alexander de Peck. He died before 7 May 1322.

My Domesday Book version says "Scrivenship in Lincolnshire was the King's land. Robert was the steward. A church, mill and a deer park was there. The lord of the manor has the right, granted by William the Conqueror to act as the Grand Champion of England and standard bearer at Coronations."

NORMAN PEOPLE

Marmion. Robert, William, Geoffrey, Marmion, Normandy, 1180-95 (MRS). A well-known baronial family, Lords and Viscounts of Fontenay le Tesson, Normandy. They appear to have been a branch of the Tessons.

Ralph Tesson, who brought 120 knights of his dependence to the aid of Duke William at the battle of Val des Dunes 1047, founded c. 1055 the Abbey of Fontenay near Caen (Gall. Christ. xi. 413). A charter of Ralph Tesson was witnessed by William Marmion or Marmilon, probably his brother, c. 1070 (Ibid.), who with his family possessed part of Fontenay. Robert Marmion, his son, Viscount of Fontenay, passed into England with the Conqueror, and had extensive grants, his descendants a century later holding seventeen fees in England and five in Normandy (Lib. Niger; Feoda Norm. Duchesne; also the paper of M. Vaultier, Mem. Soc. Ant. Norm. x. 94). The Tessons of Normandy bore gules, a fesse ermine; the Marmions vair, a fesse gules; and the Percys, another branch, azure, a fesse indented or. See PERCY. → see Marmion arms on

Some experts say Marmion
"came with the Conqueror"
as did Raul de Tesson.

A reminder of his stay - King Henry of England m. with whom he had only two children (Ama — who divorced in the "White Ship" and Matilda, etc. etc. the real ruler of England who died. 2nd to be a king & queen and my piece, now she returned to England. That Henry had at least 20 bastards, his only legitimate son was dead. He named him to Geoffrey Fitzplant, a young man. They didn't like each other but had sons, eventually & Henry Henry I got the barons to promise to have the King Matilda as Queen — but they didn't like her & went for Stephen of Blois. Henry I's nephew (see above) Stephen was a terrible ruler. Matilda's forces fought him unsuccessfully.
Realizing his own incapability, King Stephen agreed to appoint Matilda's son as King. Henry II was a capable King who solved many problems.

VAUX

D1-24 (#26)

Historian Anthony Camp wrote a small book listing the names of Normans who fought for William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings - according to reports on the subject. On page 88 is listed the names of Robert and Aitard VAUX. Chamberlain & Great added the following by producing two lines of early Vaux married lines - unconnected ones starting later.

VAUX

The family of Vaux derived their surname from the terram et feodum de Vallibus in Normandy, which King John on 14 July 1199, confirmed to the abbey of St. Jean de Falaise. Robert de Vaux and Aitard de Vaux (of Surlingham), who were apparently brothers, appear in the Domesday Survey as holding of the fee of Bigod extensive lands in Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex.

NEHGR 96:100-106 (1942); Falaise p.97;
CP II:302, CP IX:397,405,406; Burke Dorm.p.389

1. Robert de Vaux, m.

ch. 2. Robert de Vaux, Aitard de Vaux.

Robert de Vaux was in Normandy in 1050.

2. Robert de Vaux, (living 1086),

m. Unknown, dau. of Hubert de Munchensi, [869-1]

ch. Robert de Vaux, m. Agnes, Gilbert de Vaux,

3. Hubert de Vaux. → c & line 1

Robert de Vaux was of Pentney, county Norfolk, 1086.

Though there is a gap, we know they were related because they own s) acres of with the domesday land, or part of it

Then Hubert de Vaux was given a barony in Giltford for s) in 1086 by Queen Matilda but his son Robert married an Engaine as did son John.

(see D1-24 #9 & 18) More importantly, our line was up with some of the Domesday land through Roger Bigot in Fressingfield + Wacton Norfolk!

1. Sir Oliver de Vaux had son

2. John de Vaux (dca 1287) had 2 children, son Raimund and

3. Maude de Vaux m. William de Ros, son of Sir Robert de Ros.

Her husband William died in 1316. Maude died earlier and was buried in Pentney Priory in Norfolk - her bones in the wall of Belvoir (a tradition in those days).

Beaumont, or Baynard. Of this family two lines existed in England, one descended from Hubert Fitz-Ralph, Viscount of Maine, Beaumont and St. Suzanne in Maine; the other from Geoffry Baynard, or De Beaumont, Viscount of Beaumont, his brother. From the latter descend the MARSHAMS, Baynards, Kerdestons or KERRISONS, Townshends, and others in East Anglia, and the Beaumonts of Yorkshire. From the former (Hubert Fitz-Ralph) descend the Beaumonts of Devon and Leicester, Barons and Viscounts Beaumont, and baronets.

The descent is probably from Abbo, Count of Poitiers, 778, ancestor of Bernard Fitz-Adelelm, father of Eminon and Bernard, joint Counts of Poitiers, c. 814 (See L'Art de Vérifier les Dates, x. 87, &c.). The latter, who m. the dau. of Roricou, Count of Mans, is styled 'Count' of Mans by Bouquet (Hist. Franc. viii. 101); but probably his title was 'Viscount,' as Roricou had a son who succeeded as Count. This Bernard, Viscount of Mans, or Maine, lost his Earldom of Poitou, which his son Bernard recovered, whose son Ranulph, or Radulphus, became Duke of Aquitaine, and was deposed for assuming the title of King. He appears to have retired to Maine, where Radulphus (his son probably) occurs in 950. He was a benefactor to the Abbey of Marmoutiers 994 (Gall. Christ.; Anselm). He seems to have had a son, Bernard or Bénard, whose son, Radulphus, was living 1056, and whose sons were named Bénard or Bainard. They were, 1, Hubert Fitz-Ralph; 2, Ralph Bainard, Viscount of Lude, whose son lost the vast barony of Baynard's Castle in England; 3, Geoffry Bainard, or De Beaumont. ✓

Hubert Fitz-Ralph, Viscount of Maine, was celebrated for his resistance for two years to the Conqueror and his army, who besieged him in

Thos. Norman Foster Esq.
Mowbray. A well-known Norman baronial family, from the Castle of Molbrai or Moubrai, near St. Lo in the Cotentin. (See De Gerville, Anc. Chateaux de la Manche.) This name probably includes in its first syllable the name of the Scandinavian grantee c. 930, which is also preserved by Molbec, another place in the Cotentin. Robert de Molbray witnessed a charter in Normandy c. 1056 (Gall. Christ. xi. 227). Geoffrey de Moubray, his son, bishop of Coutances, accompanied the Conqueror with a great force, and was at the battle of Hastings (Wace, ii. 185). He had vast grants in England. Roger de Molbray, brother of Geoffrey, witnessed a charter in Normandy in 1066 (Gall. Christ. xi. 60), and was father of Robert de M., Earl of Northumberland, who witnessed a charter in Normandy 1082 (Gall. Christ. xi. 86). He lost his English earldom and estates, and the next heir was Nigel de Albini, who assumed the name of Mowbray, and from whom the English barons Mowbray, Earls of Nottingham and Dukes of Norfolk, descended. See Dugdale and Banks.

MORTIMER

American Peoples Encyclopedia says:

Mortimer, Roger de, 1st Earl of March (1287?-1330).

The misgovernment of the country under Edward II gave his wife Isabella the excuse for allying herself with Mortimer, and together they invaded England from the Low Countries in 1326.

They captured and put to death Despenser, ~~the~~ and the king himself fell into their hands, and was ultimately murdered. During the minority of Edward III Mortimer and his royal paramour Isabella ruled the country although there was nominally a council of regency; but in 1330 the young king asserted himself and had Mortimer put to death.

CLIFFORD

The family took its name from their land. Clifed is a small village near Heng in Hereford. ① Poncius (or Pons) first known, had ^{five} ~~four~~ sons

- ② Richard Fitz Ponce, youngest son, (-1138) in Maud. (Two brothers, Walter and Diego, the latter our ancestor in Downey Book - in Herts, Bedford, etc. Brother Robert Fitz Ponce was ancestor of a noble Lucy line.)
- ③ Walter de Clifford (-1190) m. by 1138 Margaret de Toer, dau Ralph. ^(Cragg-1)
He inherited the estates of uncle Walter Diego. He probably obtained the barony of Clifford from his father-in-law (others say he got it from his mother Maud). By the marriage of Henry II also lord in Shropshire etc. and Wales. He ravaged the lands of Prince Rhys ap Iorwerth in 1164 slew Cadwgon ap Maredudd. (His sister Rosemound de Clifford was beautiful. She became mistress of Henry II, King of England.)
- ④ Walter de Clifford (-1231) m. Sibyl de Langer, dau of Robert II de Langer.

TO ENI

The name is derived from Toeni (now Tosny) in Louisiana.

- (1) Hugh de Cevalcanplagn - Lord of Cevalcam in Normandy is claimed by some historians to descend from Malahute, uncle of Rollo, the first Duke of Normandy. In 942 Duke of Normandy William Longsword (first really Christian Duke, made Archbishop of Reims). But Hugh was fertile, begot many children & founded the church. (Son Hugobert)
- (2) Radulf (or Radolf) de Taeni gave giron the estate by his brother.
- (3) Ralph II de Taeni (ca 870-) the Duke of Normandy the Currier Till ierres. In 1015 he started to go to Jerusalem but instead fought the Greeks.
- (4) Roger de Taeni (890 - 1035) MC Godshut (Capdele) He was a highly man-beast bear of Normandy. He led an army to Spain vs the Saracens while Duke Radulf I was in Capdele. The Bear's stay in Spain is years to m. a Spanish wife who divorced him when he returned to Normandy, independent that the best lord (Gavelkin - the Conqueror) became Duke.
- (5) Ralph de Taeni (1015? - 1162?) refused to be holyday Thudobane at Harling with the Bayeux & wanted to fight & give 37 laddys nearly in Vagae. He married Isabel, dau of Simon
- (6) Ralph de Taeni II (ca 1216) Lord of Flemish, G Helt, served King Henry in battle de Montfaucon & Normandy. Then in Egypt Africa, dau. of Welfreys & son of Northwaleye.
- (7) Margaret de Taeni n. Walter de Clifford (# 16 & 17 reverse)

At first these 2 Berkeley families were not related.
 Right after the Conquest most English men lost their land but Harding, a shrewd merchant was an exception. The king got land from King of England Edward the Confessor, he was entitled enough to realize he must go with the flow.
 His son Robert (Berkeley from Normans) got Berkeley from Wm. Fitz Osbert (Dorset County) including Gloucester & Wiltshire lands.
 But like so many others, competing armies of Ocean Market & S. S. S. S.
 (both poor rulers) were by 1170, did Robert in 1201 his daughter married Harding's son Maurice, also got the Castle and started the same Berkeley family

IN THE WALL OF THE SOUTH AISLE OF THE CHOR OF BRISTOL CATHEDRAL.

Berkeley, Morris and Thomas de— (H. III. Roll) bore, gules, a chevron argent; Arden and St. George Rolls.

Berkele, Sir Thomas—bore, at the battle of Boroughbridge 1322, gules "queyntee de la mermounde" for a similar crux, see Sir JOHN DE CROMWELL: Queyntee d'argent fretty de ses armes d'ermine. Parliamentary Writs (Vol. 23), 1830, il. app. 196. The shields for these coats are left blank in Bodley's Copy of the Roll: their Heraldic interpretation was evidently beyond Brooke, York Herald of that day.

Berkeley, Sir Thomas, baron 1295—Sealed the Barons' letter to the Pope 1301, and bore, at the battle of Falkirk 1298, gules, crusily patée and a chevron argent, Nobility Rolls; and so borne by Sir MORRIS or THOMAS at the siege of Calais 1345-8, and in Surrey and other Rolls. See Monumental Effigy, Baron THOMAS was father of Sir MAURICE and Sir JOHN, in the next par., and of Sir THOMAS 1308.

Berkeley, Sir Maurice de, banneret, baron 1308—bore, at the battle of Falkirk 1298, and at the siege of Carlaverock 1300, gules, crusily patée and a chevron argent (with a blue label of 3 because his father Thomas was then alive); Parly. Roll. Lord BERKELEY bore it also at the siege of Rouen 1418 (F.). The shield of Sir MORRIS, H. VI., has nine crosses patée, in the Arundel Roll; and that of Sir JOHN (brother of Sir MAURICE 1308), of co. Glouc., three (or) in the Parly. Roll; he served also at the battle of Falkirk. JAMES (R. II.) differenced with a crescent azure; Surrey Roll.

Berkeley, Maurice de—bore, in the second Dunstable tournament 1334, gules, crusily argent and a chevron ermine (F.); in Surrey Roll (R. II.), crusily patonce. THOMAS bore the chevron argent in Segar Roll &c. F.

Mortimer, William, of Attleborough, baron 1294—bore, or, floretée sable, Nobility Roll; his son, Sir CONSTANTINE, bore the same 3, 2, 1 at the first Dunstable tournament 1308, and as floretée (F.) at the battle of Boroughbridge 1322. Ascribed also to WILLIAM in Arden and St. George Rolls. In the Ashmole Roll, the coat also occurs differenced with a label (3) gules; another, with a bordure engrailed argent.

Mortimer, John—bore, at the second Dunstable tournament 1344, as also, Sir WILLIAM, knighted at the capitulation of Calais 1348, azure, floretée argent.

Mortimer, Henry de, of Foxcote—(H. III. Roll) bore, argent on a cross azure five escallops of the field; Arden Roll. WILLIAM, bore the escallops or (F.), in St. George Roll.

Mortimer, Sir Hugh de, of Richard's Castle, baron 1299—bore, at the (F.) battle of Falkirk 1298, and at the siege of Carleaverock 1300, gules, two bars vair. (F.) Ascribed also to JOHN in Jenyns' Ordinary and to ROBERT (?) in Dering Roll. F.

Mortimer, Robert de—(H. III. Roll) bore, Barry or and vert floretée; Norfolk Roll.

Mortimer, Walron—(E. III. Roll) bore, argent, two bars gules, on a chief of the last three six-foyles of the first—cinquefoyles in the trick; Jenyns' Ordinary.

Mortimer, William de—(E. III. Roll) bore, gules, crussily or, two bars vair; Arden Roll.

Mortimer, Sir William, banneret—(H. VI. Roll) bore, gules, a cross flory or, Arundel Roll; in which the name is doubtful, perhaps LATYMER is intended.

Mortimer, Edmund, of Wigmore, baron 1295—bore, as did ROGER his father, Barry (6) or and azure, on a chief of the first three palets between two esquires based of the second, over all an inesccheon argent (sealed the Barons' letter to the Pope 1301; Camden and Guillim Rolls. [EDMUND, last Earl of March and Ulster, K.R.; quartered DE BURGH or, a cross gules; Surrey Roll.] His brethren differenced.

(1) Sir WILLIAM with a baston, and

(2) Sir GEOFFREY, with a saltire over all gules (F.); ascribed also to Sir JOHN of Herefordshire in Parly. Roll.

Mortimer, Sir Roger, of Chirke, a baron 1307, bore, MORTIMER's arms with the inesccheon ermine (F.) (wrongly argent in the Nobility Roll) at the battle of Falkirk 1298 and at the siege of Carleaverock 1300; sealed the Barons' letter to the Pope 1301; see also Harl. MS. 1481 f. 33, 66.

The field is as often as not tricked the reverse and bars (3) rather than Barry. The seals of EDMUND and ROGER show one palet only on the chief.

Mortimer, Hugh, lord of Chilmarnock, uncle to EDMUND above-named, bore, at the battle of Boroughbridge 1322, MORTIMER's arms or and gules—the inesccheon argent—Harl. MS. 1481 f. 33, 66; ascribed also to Sir HENRY of Herefordshire in the Parly. Roll; the reverse, gules and or, ascribed to JOHN, in Norfolk and St. George Rolls.

Mortimer, Sir Roger de, le fis (/ ROGER, 2nd baron) of Herefordshire, bore, at the first Dunstable tournament 1308, MORTIMER's arms or and azure, the inesccheon (argent) charged with a lion rampant purpure (F.); Parly. Roll. HENRY bore the reverse azure and or, the inesccheon (argent) billettée sable; Arden Roll.

Mortimer, Raf de—(H. III. Roll) bore, MORTIMER's arms sable and or—the inesccheon argent; Arden Roll.

KYME

Telbogs (Teille bogs)

Kyme is now North Kyme & South Kyme separated by a highway.

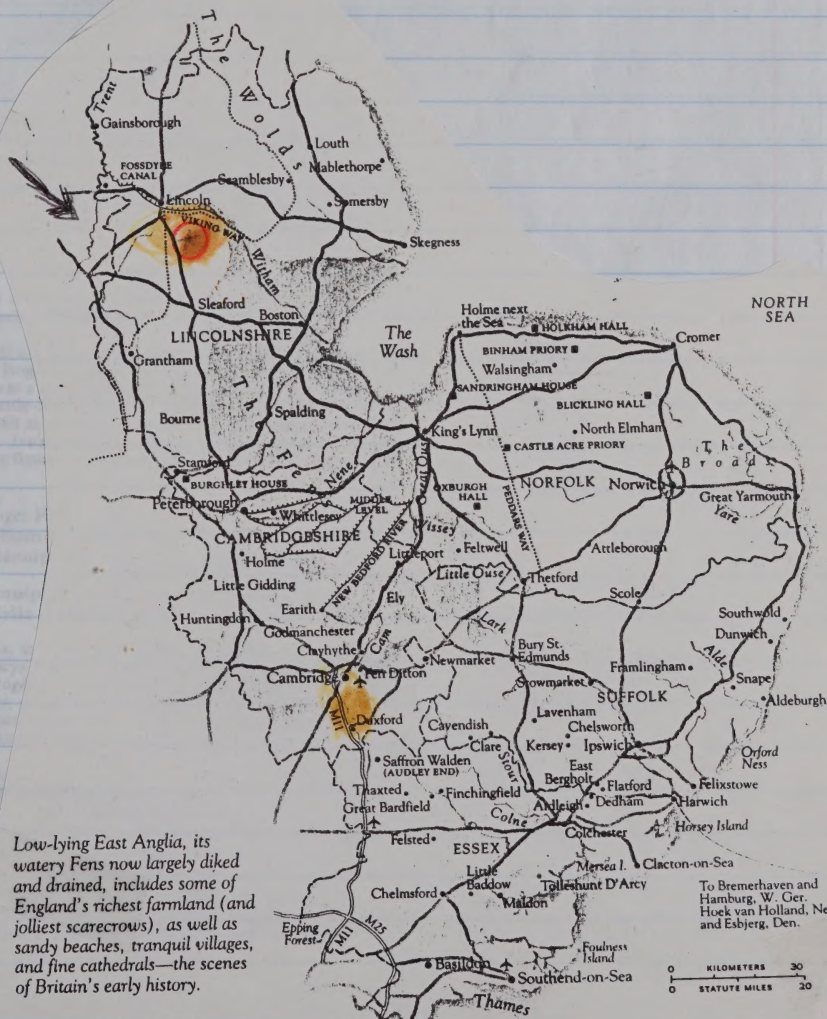

The word Kyme is very ancient old English - kyr cymber, and chime in Danerdy bogs - meaning "place of the hollow."

Our own map goes all the way to the Tenes River, but Lincolnshire is actually just across the Humber from Yorkshire.

On the English map (over) Kyme is about where the "O" in Lincoln is.

Northchime - (hedge) Robert de Tosny & 100 from him. Colson fishing - fen land. *
(Saxo) (Chine) - King's land, Gilbert de Ghent & Eynright from him (2) charges,
(6) fishponds, 3 fishponds & church with Saxo work.

* Was this 100 and 100 - 200?
 Our 100 Teillebogs?

A small book, My Ancestors Came with the Conqueror by Anthony Camp lists names of hundreds of men whom researchers claim to have been at the Battle of Hastings in 1066. Among them were three men, Guillaume Taillebois, Ivo Taillebois and Radulfas Taillebois. This translates into William, Ivo and Ralph, probably brothers - (pg 80 in book). As our exhibit here says, "very little is known." My gut feeling is that our forefather was William, probably a younger brother, who came land in Lincolnshire, not far from Lynn.

PS, Our exhibit does not mention it, but during Ivo's lifetime Lancaster still belonged to Scotland. The Conqueror's son, ^{Henry} William Rufus was first to conquer that area.

TAILLEBOIS

Very little is known about this family, except that they were Angevin. Three of the name are written in Domesday in 1086. William Taillebois was an under-tenant in Bedford, Hereford, and Lincoln. He was probably a brother of Ivo Taillebois.

1. Ivo Taillebois, (-ca 1094),
m. 1072, Lucia Malet, dau. of William Malet, [548-2]
ch. 2. Lucia Taillebois.

Ivo Taillebois held a barony in Lincoln and Norfolk and was lord of the whole district of Hogland. He was the sheriff of Lincoln in or before 1086, where he was a great prince, holding court with much pomp and splendor at his castle of Spalding. He held large portions of the north of Lancaster as well as that part of Westmorland which came under the barony of Kendal. Ivo married Lucia, daughter of William Malet, one of the most imposing figures at the Conquest. Ivo died about 1094.

ch. Ranulph de Gernon, m. Maud de Caen, [117-13]
3. Adeliz le Meschin.

Some genealogists, to avoid chronological difficulties, suggested that there were two Lucys, the wife of Ivo Taillebois, and her daughter, wife successively of Roger Fitz Gerold and Ranulph le Meschin. Charter evidence, however, proves that there was only one Lucy. Therefore, this Lucia was apparently the wife first of Ivo Taillebois, second, Roger Fitz Gerold, and third, Ranulph le Meschin. Baron by Writ.

- I. 1371. WILLIAM HERON, s. and h. of Roger, 2nd son of William the last Baron, summ. to Parl. 8 Jan. 44 Edw. III. 1371, but never afterwards, and this Barony is presumed to have become Extinct on his death.

HERON.

Baron by Writ.

- I. 1393. 1. WILLIAM HERON, grands. of Odonel Heron, 3rd s. of William, the last Baron by Tenure, having m. Elizabeth, sister and h. of John Baron Say, he was summ. to Parl. from 13 Nov. 17 Rich. II. 1393, to 25 Aug. 5 Hen. IV. 1404, as "Willielmo Heron, Chl'r," although generally considered to be Lord Say, jure uxoris, for in a charter of 1 Hen. IV. to which he was a witness he is styled "William Heron Lord of Say, Steward of the King's Household;" ob. Oct. 1404, s. r., when the Barony created by the Writ of 17 Rich. II., if considered as a distinct dignity from that of Say, became Extinct.

HERTFORD.

Earls.

- I. Steph. 1. RICHARD DE CLARE, s. and h. of Gilbert de Clare (vide Clare), was Earl of Hertford, and possessed of the third penny of that county, before or early in the reign of King Stephen; slain by the Welsh 1139.

^m Elizabeth, his wife, died 8 July 1399, and if the Writs issued to her first and second husbands were only applicable to the Barony by Writ which had descended to her, and in virtue of which they were summoned, the issuing of such Writs would, it may be thought, have ceased with her life, as in the case of Ralph de Monthermer, Earl of Gloucester, who ceased to be so summoned as Earl of Gloucester immediately upon the death of his wife; but Sir William Heron, who after his wife's death became, under a settlement, tenant for life of the lands of his wife's inheritance, continued to be summoned until 1404. It would seem, therefore, that tenure of his wife's lands entitled Sir William Heron to a dignity which partook of the nature both of the Barony by Tenure and the Barony by Writ. Vide observations under FALVESLEY.

HERON, OF CHIPCHASE.

CREATED
20th Nov. 1662.

EXTINCT
27th May, 1801.

Arms—Azure, three herons arg.

This family, anciently written HAIRUN, HEYRUN, and HEIRUN, was long of eminence in the county of Northumberland. One of its members, William Heron, who had license to castellate his house at Ford, was summoned to parliament as a baron in the time of EDWARD III. and another, Sir Richard Heron, was similarly dignified by RICHARD II. (See BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.)

SIR JOHN HAIRUN, one of the soldiers of the Conqueror, possessed Ford, with a very good estate, and acquired Chipchase by marriage with the daughter and heir of its Saxon lord, Sir William Chipchase, of Chipchase Castle. From Sir John we pass to his lineal descendant,

Tebellus (or Tibellus)

Hearns or Heron - from Heron near Raven. William Heron held estates in Normandy temp. Philip Augustus. Odonel Heron & William Rufus witnessed a charter in Dorham. Alben Hairun held a barony in 1165. Heron Tihel de Herion was in Essex 1086. 1165 Alben de Heron was in Hertford, Essex; Jordan in York & Northumberland in the latter county the Hearns were of great note & William was summoned (to parliament?) in 1269.

UMFREVILLE

There were eight communes of the name in Normandy, but probably Amfreville-sur-Iton, between Brionne and Louviers in Normandy, was the residence of this family. Umfreville is the English name. Robert de Umfreville, a kinsman of the Conqueror, went to England with him at the Conquest.

ch. 2. Robert de Umfreville.

Robert de Umfreville, called "Robert with the Beard," went to England with William the Conqueror in 1066. In 1076 William granted to Robert, the forest, valley, and lordship of Redesdale, in Northumberland, to hold, by the service of defending that part of the country forever, from enemies and wolves with the sword which King William had by his side when he entered Northumberland. By this grant he had authority for holding, governing, exercising, hearing, and judging, in all the pleas of the crown, as well as others occurring within the precincts of Redesdale.

The Roots

(ii) Scotland

The origin of the kingdom of Scotland is usually dated from the union of the kingdom of the Picts, in central Scotland, with that of the Scots of Dalriada in Argyll in 848-9 under Kenneth MacAlpin, the King of Dalriada, who perhaps enforced by arms an hereditary claim to the Pictish throne.¹ The home of the Scots was Ireland and they came to Argyll, which they called Dalriada, across the sea from an older, smaller Dalriada in County Antrim, late in the fifth century under their king, Fergus Mor MacEirc, said to have died in 501.² Kenneth MacAlpin was twelfth in descent from Fergus Mor according to what Chadwick thought 'one of the safest genealogies which have come down to us';³ Fergus Mor himself is made fifteenth in descent from an Irish high king Conaire Mor, whose death forms the subject of a saga and who was regarded as the ancestor of the royal line as late as the twelfth century.⁴ Fergus Mor and his brothers and doubtless Eirc their father are accepted as historical, whatever view be taken of their alleged ancestry.

The male line of Fergus Mor ended with the death of King Malcolm II in 1034, from the marriage of whose daughter Bethoc with Crinan's succeeding kings sprang. Crinan, we have seen, was probably himself sprung from an Irish kingly line. His last male descendant on the throne of Scotland was Alexander III (d. 1286), though the family of Dunbar can show male descent from him to this day. The succeeding Scottish dynasties, Balliol, Bruce and Stewart were by paternal origin Picard, Norman and Breton respectively, though their claim to the throne came by descent from Fergus Mor.

Very many English families descend from Fergus Mor and Crinan through the marriage of Henry I of England (d. 1135) to Maud (d. 1118), daughter of Malcolm III of Scotland (d. 1093), in 1100. Malcolm's son David I (d. 1153), who had spent his youth at Henry's court, introduced Norman knights and feudal organization into Scotland and between his day and the renunciation of English claims over English and Scottish baronage took place.

The seven original earldoms or normanerships of Scotland represented, more or less, the seven provinces which made up the Pictish kingdom of Alban. The heirship of the Celtic Mormaers of Buchan passed by marriage to the Norman Comyns and from them to the English Lords Beaumont. In 1243 Maud, Countess of Angus, married a Northumbrian baron Gilbert de Unfeville, whose descendants were English and after 1381 did not even claim their Scottish earldom. She married secondly (c. 1247) Richard of Dover, son of Richard FitzRoy, a bastard of John, King of England, and Isabel her daughter by this marriage married David, Earl of Atholl (d. 1270), whose descendants thus acquired English interests which led to their final settlement in England.¹

All the three daughters and coheirs of Alan, Lord of Galloway (d. 1234), married Anglo-Norman lords. Elena was married to Roger de Quincy, Earl of Winchester (d. 1264), Christina to William de Forz, Earl of Aumale (d. 1260), and Dervorgilla (d. 1290) to John de Balliol of Barnard Castle (d. 1269). The English descendants of Elena are very numerous.

(iii) Wales

The oldest surviving Welsh royal genealogies² appear from internal evidence to have been drawn up in the time of Rhodri Mawr (d. 877),³ King of North Wales, and trace his ancestry on several lines and the ancestry of princes contemporary with him. The oldest and historically the most important line is that of the older dynasty of Gwynedd from which Rhodri was descended through his grandmother. Its founder was Cunedda who came to Gwynedd (North Wales) from Manaw Gododdin, near the Firth of Forth, about A.D. 450, with his sons, and with great slaughter drove out the Scots (i.e. Irish) from Gwynedd, so that they never returned. The names of the father, grandfather and great-grandfather, of Cunedda in the genealogy, Edeyrn, Padarn Beirudd (of the Red Robe) and Tegid, are thought to be historical names of Romanized Britons or Picts, Eternus, Paternus and Tactus.⁴ Among the sons of Cunedda were three with Roman names, Romanus (Rhufon), Donatus (Dunod) and Eternus (Edeyrn). His grandson Marianus (Meirion) gave his name to Merioneth. His great-grandsons Cynlas (Cuneclasus) and Maelgwn (Maglocunus) were among the

TRACY

Norman People

T1-20-20-18

Tracy, a baronial name. William de Tracy, Normandy 1180-95 (MRS); Turgis, Oliver, Reginald, William de T. 1198 (lb.). The Castle and Barony of Tracy were near Vire, Normandy. William de Tracy came to England 1066, and is mentioned by Wace as at the battle of Hastings (ii. 244). The family possessed two baronies in Devon 1165, and also estates in Gloucester and Normandy. (See Dugdale, Banks.) The Viscounts Tracy were a branch.

TRACY, OF STANWAY.

CREATED
29th June, 1611.

EXTINCT
in 1677.

Lineage.

The surname of Tracy accrued to this family from a maternal ancestor, descended from the Tracys, Lords of Barnstaple, in the county of Devon, who came in with the Conqueror, and were styled from the town of Tracy, in Normandy.

HAROLD, according to Dugdale, the son of Ralph, Earl of Hereford, but by other authorities an illegitimate son of King HAROLD, possessed at the general survey, numerous lordships in England, amongst which were SUDLEY, and TODINGTON, in the county of Gloucester, with the Castle of Ewyas, and other lands in Herefordshire, secured, doubtless, by his intermarriage with Maud, daughter of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester. This Harold had two sons, JOHN, his heir.

Robert, who had the Castle of Ewyas, and assumed therefrom the surname of Ewyas.

The elder son assuming his surname from Sudley, the chief seat which he inherited, became

JOHN DE SUDLEY. He m. the daughter and heir of Traci, feudal Lord of Barnstaple, and had issue, RALPH, his successor, for whose descendants refer to BURKE's Extinct Peerage.

WILLIAM, who adopted his mother's name of Tracy.

The younger son,

WILLIAM DE TRACY,† lived in the reign of Henry II. and held lands of his brother, Ralph de Sudley, by one knight's fee, which was probably the manor of Todington, for it appears by Domesday Book, that it was held by the Lord Sudley, of the manor of Sudley, and in the reign of Edward I. the Tracys are expressly said to be possessed of it, and this William, in a deed of Otwell, Lord of Sudley, son and heir of the said Ralph, is called his uncle; but that this is the same Sir William Tracy, who was concerned in the assassination of THOMAS A BECKET, does not appear, although FULLER, in his Worthies, makes the assassin to be Sir William Tracy, of Todington, whom he describes as "a man of high birth, state, of stomach, a favourite of the king's, and his daily attendant;" but, says Collins, "I am not of his opinion, and 'tis evident, there were others of the same name living at the time." The son of this William,

SIR OLIVER TRACY, is mentioned amongst the knights of Gloucestershire, that paid scutage in the second of King JOHN, his son.

SIR WILLIAM TRACY, is recorded among the knights of the same county, in the 17th EDWARD I. and with Ralph de Sudley, his kinsman, is stated to have had a command in the Scottish war. He left a son and

Note: Charles Martel, #4 above brilliantly led one of the most important battles in history! He defeated the Muslim who had taken over most of Europe, forcing them out of France and Germany. If it had not been for him, our world today might be a far different and worse place! (Battle of Poitiers, 732 A.D.)

Reading this, we shudder at the horrors brought on by the fall of Rome. One of the villains was the Visigoth, Alaric who then went to occupy Spain and part of Southern France (Gaul). It took cruelty to counteract cruelty - such a man was Clovis I (c.465 - 511) King of the Salian Franks in 481, who defeated Alaric II, the son. King Clovis, though baptized in 496, consolidated his holdings by contriving the deaths of all rival kings. All the people below were related to, but not descended from Clovis I.

- ① Clovis the Ripuarian, living 420, Frankish King of Cologne in Roman times
- ② Childebert, King of Cologne living 450 AD
- ③ Sigobert "the Lame", King of Belgians, murdered 509 by his own son influenced by Clovis I, the king
- ④ Clovis "the Patricide" duped by Clovis I, was slain the same year.
- ⑤ Manderic, # 16 above, of Vitry-en-Ponthois, was very young when his father died. He later revolted against Thierry I who slew him.

Blank pedigree chart form with multiple rectangular boxes for recording family information across several generations.

T1-22-22 #2 Age following

WILLIAM DE VALENCE, EARL OF PEMBROKE.
IN S. EDMUND CHAPEL, WESTMINSTER, 1296. After Gough.

The first William de Valence was son of Queen Isabella de France (sister of King John of England and her second husband Hugh X de Lusignan. King Henry III was saluted when his half-brother came to England and made him
Earl of Pembroke).

His daughter Isobel married John Hastings.
Sir John Hastings and
other descendants incorporated the Valence coat-of-arms
into Hastings coat of arms as shown in the effigy at right and the description
below.

(T1-22)

Valence v. Earl of Pembroke.

Valence, Aymer de, of Mountenake, banneret, baron 1299, Earl of PEMBROKE 1308, sealed the Barons' letter to the Pope 1301—bore, at the battle of Falkirk 1298 and at the siege of Carlaverock 1300, Barry (10) argent and azure, ten martlets in orle 3. 2. 2, 3 gules, on his banner; Nobility and Parliamentary Rolls—burialle 12. 14. 15 or 20; ascribed also to WILLIAM (his father) Earl of PEMBROKE, who took up the cross in the last Crusade 1270; Grimaldi Roll (see Monumental Effigy)—(azure and argent) also to WILLIAM in Camden Roll and gules in Glover Roll. (F.) For differences see Harl. MS. 1418 fo. 29.

Valence, Sir William de—(E. II. Roll) bore, argent, a chief dancettée (3) azure; Parliamentary Roll.

Hastings, Sir John, of co. Glouc. (brother of Sir WILLIAM)—bore, at the first Dunstable tournament 1308, HASTINGS within a bordure of Valence, also blazoned burulée argent and azure, eight martlets in orle gules, over all on an escutcheon (of HASTINGS), or a maunch gules. (F.) Sir WILLIAM, banneret, bore it also (E. II.); Parliamentary Roll. See another Sir WILLIAM, who bore HASTINGS, with a label of PEMBROKE.

De Valence Arms as depicted:

Barry of 10 AZ & ARGENT,
10 martlets in orle 3-2-2-3
(none in effigy)

TI-22-22 #2 for filing

(17)

The first thing I noticed was that green ink was on the bottom (bottom) very top of the page and the same ink was on the X & the top. This thing is so bright and shiny that it can be found on the top and the top of the page.

This is the first time I have seen this thing in the other books
in the library.
Before we go into the top of the book
there is the top of the book and the top of the book.

1. Wymarches ancestor of the Essex family was a native of Normandy.
2. Robert de Essex (1007-1071) Lord of Rayleigh, was also called "Robert the Staller" because he held that position in the court of King Edward the Confessor who seems to have been related. He was granted other estates + some in Sharnbury which he gave to his son-in-law, Richard Fitz Scroth. On William the Conqueror land in Hastings he sent warning that King Harold was coming. He was given estates in Essex plus made a sheriff by William.

TAILLEBOIS

Very little is known about this family, except that they were Angevin. Three of the name are written in Domesday in 1086. William Taillebois was an under-tenant in Bedford, Hereford, and Lincoln. He was probably a brother of Ivo Taillebois.

Line 1023

1. Ivo Taillebois, (ca 1094),
m. 1072, Lucia Malet, dau. of William Malet, [548-2]
ch. 2. Lucia Taillebois.

Ivo Taillebois held a barony in Lincoln and Norfolk and was lord of the whole district of Hogland. He was the sheriff of Lincoln in or before 1086, where he was a great prince, holding court with much pomp and splendor at his castle of Spalding. He held large portions of the north of Lancaster as well as that part of Westmorland which came under the barony of Kendal. Ivo married Lucia, daughter of William Malet, one of the most imposing figures at the Conquest. Ivo died about 1094.

2. Lucia Taillebois.

- m. (1) ca 1098, Roger Fitz Gerold,
ch. William de Roumare, Earl of Lincoln,
m. (2) bef 1110, Ranulph III le Meschin, Earl of Chester, son of Ranulph II, Vicomte of Bayeux, [17-11]
ch. Ranulph de Gernon, m. Maud de Caen, [17-13]
3. Adeliz le Meschin.

Some genealogists, to avoid chronological difficulties, suggested that there were two Lucys, the wife of Ivo Taillebois, and her daughter, wife successively of Roger Fitz Gerold and Ranulph le Meschin. Charter evidence, however, proves that there was only one Lucy. Therefore, this Lucia was apparently the wife first of Ivo Taillebois, second, Roger Fitz Gerold, and third, Ranulph le Meschin.

3. Adeliz le Meschin.

- m. (1) Richard Fitz Gilbert, Lord of Clare, son of Gilbert Fitz Richard, [503-11]
ch. Gilbert Fitz Gilbert, Earl of Hertford and Lord of Clare, 4. Roger de Clare, m. Maud de St. Hilary, [503-13]

The rest is that that 4th part of the family - suggesting that our branch descends from William #2.

Without dates, charts tell only so much, but since our branch was at Kyme in Lincolshire Lacy #9 de Kyme must have been sole heir.

Percy Hadley, Northumberland Families [Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 1968-70], 2:4 [Talboys].

2. SIR WALTER TALBOYS was born about 1351 and died 20 or 21 September 1417 on St. Matthew's Day. He was aged 18 in 1369, a Member of Parliament in 1382 and 1386, and Sheriff of Lincolnshire in 1389. He married MARGARET _____. (AR line 224 and other references as above.)

3. SIR JOHN TALBOYS, of Stallingborough, Sheriff of Lincolnshire 1426, died 16 April 1467. He married AGNES, daughter and heiress of Sir Robert Cokefield of Nuthall, Nottinghamshire, and his wife Cecily, daughter and heiress of Robert Charnells. (CP 7:358; Lincs. Ped., 945; V. Lincoln, 6-7; Alfred W. Gibbons, Notes on the Visitation of Lincolnshire 1634 [Lincoln, 1898], 97.)

4. JOHN TALBOYS of Stallingborough, the younger, Esq. (according to Lincs. Ped., "sometimes called Walter"), died before April 1467, predeceasing his father. He married KATHERINE, daughter of Sir William Githorpe (Lincs. Ped., V. Lincoln, and Gibbons, as for 3, above).

5. MARGARET TALBOYS was born about 1446 (aged about 21 in 1467), and died before July 1491, daughter and heiress of John Talboys. She married JOHN AYS-COUGH, who died 20 July 1491, son and heir of Sir William Ayscough, Knt., Chief Justice of Common Pleas who died in 1456 and is buried at Bedale, Yorkshire, and his wife Elizabeth Caythorpe, daughter and coheir of John Caythorpe of Argum [or Erghum] by his wife Alice Hungate, daughter of William Hungate, and her also to her cousin William Hungate of Yorkshire.

John Ayscough, Esq., Robert Ayscough, doctor in "decrees," Richard Ayscough, "gentleman," and four others acquired the manor of "Stalyngborough called Arsy Maner in Stalyngborough," Lincolnshire, 12 May 1468. John Ayscough served on the Commissions of the peace in Lincolnshire, Lindsey [District], in February and September 1468 and 1470. He received a general pardon 22 April 1471 (CPR, 1468-71, 85,258,621). On 7 March 1472 Robert Talboys and John Ascu [Ayscough] with others served as a Commission of Array for the defence against the King's enemies. (CPR, 1472, 352; Rev. J. Conway Walter, The Ayscough Family and Their Connections [Horncastle, Eng., 1896], 4-5.)

6. ELIZABETH (MARGARET in Lincs. Ped., 154) AYS-COUGH was born probably about 1465. She married WILLIAM BOOTH, who died 20 October 1509, son of Henry Booth of Middle Soyle in the parish of Killingholme, Lincoln, jure uxoris Admural, and his wife Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Gascaryk, Lord of Middle Soyle in Killingholme (Lincs. Ped., 60 [Ayscough], 154 [Booth]; V. Lincoln, 6-7 [Ayscough], 20 [Booth]; IPM of William Bothe of Killingholme, PRO C142-25-72).

7. JOHN BOOTH was born in 1487/8 and was dead by 22 or 23 May 1537, being aged 22 years or more on 30 September 1510 according to the Inquisition Post Mortem of his father's estate, cited above. He married ANNE THIMBLEBY (Line 2, No. 5, below), who was alive in 1537, daughter of Richard Thimbleby, Esq., and his wife Elizabeth Hilton (IPM of Richard Thymelby, W. P. W. Phillimore, ed. Abstracts of the Inquisitiones Post Mortem relating to Nottinghamshire [1485-1546],

8. ELIZABETH (called ELEANOR in Visitation Pedigrees) BOOTH was born about 1510, probably at Killingholme, Lincolnshire, died 13 July 1547, and was buried at Brocklesby, Lincolnshire, the daughter of John Booth of Killingholme. She married, probably at Brocklesby, ca. 1531, EDWARD HAMBY, who was born in 1512/3 and died there 29 June 1559, son of George Hamby and his wife Margaret (Green or Cutler? See Register, 145[1991]:104-7). (Brocklesby Parish Register, 1, 4-7, 17, 19, 24, 25; Lincs. Ped., 447; V. Lincoln, 20, 58,154; V. Suffolk, 194; V. London, 89-90; Larkin Ms; Harl. Ms 1550; W. H. KATHERINE HAMBY'S SECOND LINE OF ROYAL DESCENT

1. JOAN TALBOYS, daughter of Henry Talboys and Eleanor de Boroughdon, died before December 1397 (for her royal descent see Line 1, No. 1, above). She married in or before 1379 SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL (see Line 3, No. 5, below), who was born about 1364 and died 31 December 1397, son and heir of Sir Andrew Luttrell by his second wife Hawise le Despenser. Sir Andrew Luttrell, the younger, was knighted during the lifetime of his father, and was about 26 years old when he succeeded to his property. On 8 February 2 Richard II [1379] Andrew Luttrell, Knt., granted to Andrew, his eldest son, and Joan, daughter of Henry Taillebois, his wife, the manor of Horton Pagnell, in fee with remainder to himself if the couple died without heirs (CPR, 1377-1381: 318). At his death the younger Andrew left 20 surviving children, both under age; Geoffrey and Hawise. On 18 April 1398 wardship of the lands and tenements of Andrew Luttrell, Knt., deceased, tenant in chief, in the King's hand, was granted to Henry Greene, Knt. by mainprise of John Bussy, of co. Lincoln, Knt., and Laurence Drewe of the co. of Wills, by reason of the minority of Geoffrey, the son and heir, together with his marriage (CPR, 1398:332). In 1411, Sir Geoffrey Luttrell was accused of being a disturber of the peace in Lincolnshire, and an associate of his relative, Sir Walter Tailibois who had lately entered Lincoln with about 160 armed horsemen in search of Sir Thomas Chaworth (CP, 8:289; Hist. Dunster, 2:509).

2. HAWISE LUTTRELL was born about 1393, and died 24 March 1421/2, sister and heiress of Sir Geoffrey Luttrell. By the death of her brother on 5 January 1418/9, the male line of the family became extinct. She married, first, Sir THOMAS BELESBY, who died 20 September 1415, by whom she had one son who died young. She married, second, Sir GODFREY HILTON, who died 5 August 1459, by whom she had children: Godfrey and Hawise. (Inquisitiones Post Mortem of Sir Geoffrey Luttrell, K. S. Train, ed., Abstracts of the Inquisitiones Post Mortem relating to Nottinghamshire 1350-1436, Thoroton Record Series, 12[1952], 164-5; IPM of Hawise, wife of Sir Godfrey de Hilton, ibid., 175; Hist. Dunster, 2:509-10; CP, 8:289-90.)

3. SIR GODFREY HILTON, son of Hawise by her second husband, was born 9 November 1419 and died 18 May 1472. He probably married in 1453 MARGERY _____, who died 14 November 1495 after having married, second, William Wal-

ron. (Hist. Dunster 2:509-10; IPM of Margery, wife of William Walron, as cited above, Line 1, No. 7.)

4. ELIZABETH HILTON was born about 1455 and died between 1496 and 1522, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Godfrey Hilton and his wife Margery. She married Richard THIMBLEBY, Esq., who died 24 April 1522. When Sir Godfrey Hilton died without issue, the [de jure] Barony of Luttrell fell into abeyance between Elizabeth and her sister and co-heiress Hawise, born about 1461, wife of Lawrence Breuen. Elizabeth and her husband acquired the entire manor of Imham. (CP, 8:290; Hist. Dunster, 2:509-10; IPM of Margery, wife of William Walron, and IPM of Richard Thimbleby, Esq., both cited above, Line 1, No. 7.)
5. ANNE THIMBLEBY married JOHN BOOTH. See Line 1, No. 7, above.

KATHERINE HAMBY'S THIRD LINE OF ROYAL DESCENT

1. ISABEL DE BEAUCHAMP died in 1306 (AR, 72:31), daughter of Sir William Beauchamp, 9th Earl of Warwick, and his wife Maud Fitz John. She was seventh in descent from Dermot MacMurrough, King of Leinster in Ireland (AR, lines 175-6:7; 66:26,27; 69:27,28; 70:28,29; 72:29-31), and tenth in descent from Henry I, King of France and his wife Anne of Kiev (AR, lines 53:22-4; 66:24-7). She married, first, Sir PATRICK DE CRAWORTH, who died about 7 July 1283, and second, in or by 1286, Sir HUGH LE DESPENSER of Loughborough, who was born 1 March 1260/1 and died 27 October 1326, executed for treason. He was created Earl of Winchester 10 May 1322 and was a close advisor to Edward II. (David H. Kelley, "The Ancestry of Eve of Leinster," in The Genealogist, 1[1980]:4-27; AR, lines 72:30-1, 74:30-1, 86:29; CP, 12, pt. 2:368-70, 5:437, 4:262-6.)
2. SIR PHILIP LE DESPENSER died 24 September 1313, a younger son. He married MARGARET GOUSHILL, who was born 12 May 1294 and died 29 July 1349, daughter of Sir Ralph de Goushill of Goxhill, Lincolnshire, and his wife Hawise, daughter of Sir Fuik Fitz Warrn. (CP, 4:288-90, 6:42-3.)
3. SIR PHILIP LE DESPENSER of Camoys Manor in Toppesfield, Essex, was born 6 April 1313 in Lincolnshire, and died 22 or 23 August 1349. He married JOAN, probably the daughter of Sir John De Cobham. (CP, 4:288-90.)
4. HAWISE LE DESPENSER was born about 1345 and died 10 April 1414. She married 7 September 1363, as his second wife, Sir ANDREW LUTTRELL, who was born in 1313 and died 6 September 1390, son of Sir Geoffrey Luttrell and his wife Agnes, daughter of Sir Richard de Sutton of Warsop and Sutton-on-Trent, Nottinghamshire. Her brother, Philip le Despenser, Knt., in his will dated at Gouxhill 1 August 1401 (Alfred W. Gibbons, Early Lincoln Wills, 1280-1547 [Lincoln, 1888], 99) requested burial in the church of St. Marcial de Newthous between his mother and wife Elizabeth, named sons Philip, John, and Robert, and left "to my sister Lady de Luttrell, a silver bowl with coat of arms." Sir Andrew Luttrell in his own will named as supervisor his brother, Philip le Despenser, and specified that "None to be invited to my funeral, but all who come of their own free will to be entertained with food and drink" (CP, 8:288, notes k,n).
5. SIR ANDREW LUTTRELL married JOAN TALBOYS. See Line 2, No. 1, above.

Gravestone Chronicles: Some Eighteenth-Century New England Carvers and Their Work, by Theodore Chase and Laurel K. Gabel (Boston: the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 1990, 262 pp. $25.00 plus $3.50 postage; soft cover, $15.00 plus $2.50 postage). Order from the Sales Dept., NEHGS, 101 Newbury St., Boston, MA 02116.

In 1927 Harriette M. Forbes of Worcester, Massachusetts, published the first book on early New England gravestones and their carvers. Based on visits to scores of burial sites in a 1920s sedan, 5x7 inch glass-negative photography, and years of research in county probate archives, her study uncovered an important group of unknown colonial-period and early American artisans, and demonstrated beyond any doubt the New England origin of the many thousands of uniquely decorated burial markers in the region mistakenly believed by local historians and genealogists to have been English and Welsh imports.

Gravestone Chronicles, jointly authored by Theodore Chase and Laurel K. Gabel, is proof that the methods pioneered by Mrs. Forbes continue to bear fruit. The volume begins by introducing gravestone scholarship to family researchers and general readers who are reminded that like Bible records, newspaper notices, and marriage and death registers, these markers serve as an important and continuing source of genealogical enquiry. In the meticulously-documented essays that follow, the authors identify a number of stonecutters missed by Mrs. Forbes and later scholars, and shed new light on the careers, artisanry practices, and family histories of selected carvers active in eastern Massachusetts, rural New Hampshire, and Vermont in the period 1700-1840.

"Seven Initial Carvers" examines the highly original hypothesis that young Boston-area journeymen and apprentices publicized their future careers by carving their initials into stones they made while still serving their time in their masters' shops. "The Colburn Connections" breaks new ground for the understanding of the quarry marks and codes by which carvers in Middlesex County distinguished their stone blanks and finished stones from those of carvers sharing the same stone source and carving style. "The Emmes Family" explores an artisan family whose members formed a virtual constellation of brothers, sons, sons-in-law, colleagues and apprentices all engaged in similar or related professional pursuits. Six of the seven essays in this collection have previously appeared in the Register and the Bulletin of the Connecticut Historical Society; one essay (the longest, which discusses the Emmes family of Boston) appears in print here for the first time.

Automobiles and photography have become smaller, faster, and more efficient since 1927, and many burying sites have suffered from urban growth and the ravages of time. We are fortunate that authors such as Chase and Gabel continue to join a growing list of scholars (among them Ernest Caulfield, James A. Slater, and Kevin M. Sweeney) who have contributed to this important and long-neglected branch of cultural enquiry.

THE ORIGIN OF NEVILL OF RABY

Contributed by G. ANDREWS MORIARTY, A.M., LL.B., F.S.A.
Communicated by the Committee on English and Foreign Research

Almost a half century ago Dr. Round remarked that it was somewhat extraordinary that the origin of the great and historic native house of Nevill had never been determined ("Feudal England", p. 488).

In the latter part of the twelfth century, Robert fitz Meldred of Raby, a great northern magnate, of Durham and Northumberland, married a lady of a Norman house, Isabel, daughter and eventual heiress of Geoffrey de Nevill, a Lincolnshire tenant, who in 1166 held five knights fees of the Bishop of Lincoln and four of the honor of Manasser Arsic (Red Bk., pp. 374, 302) and their descendants took the name of Nevill.

The ancestry of Robert fitz Meldred, of native English stock, who died an old man between 25 June 1242 and 26 May 1248 (N.C.P., vol. IX, p. 494), for three generations, has long been known. Robert and his younger brother Gilbert fitz Meldred were the sons of Meldred fitz Dolfin of Raby, who died about 1183, and between Mich. 1194 and Mich. 1195, Robert gave 600 marks to have seisin of his father's lands in Northumberland and Durham (Pipe Roll, 7 Richard I, p. 26). Meldred fitz Dolfin, who had a younger brother Patric fitz Dolfin, was the son of Dolfin, son of Uchtred, to whom, in 1131, the Prior of Durham granted Staindrop and Staindropshire in the Palatinate of Durham, and Raby was a township in that fee. Dolfin, thereupon, became the Prior's man, saving his faith owed to the Kings of England and Scotland, which shows that he held fees in both kingdoms (Round's "Feudal England", pp. 489-490, citing Feud. Prior. Dun., 53, 100, 140). Nothing concerning Dolfin's father Uchtred is known beyond his name, but he must have been an important tenant in Northumberland and Scotland (Round, op. cit., p. 490).

In the last three centuries various origins have been ascribed to the family. Dugdale, in his Baronia, makes Robert fitz Meldred the son of Dolfin and Dolfin the son of Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland, who was the son of the Scottish prince Meldred, son of Crinan, Lay Abbot of Dunkeld, by Bethoc, daughter and heiress of Malcolm II, King of Scotland (died in 1034), and a younger brother of King Duncan, who was murdered by Macbeth in 1040. Meldred married, about 1030-1045, Ealdgyth, daughter of Earl Uchtred of Northumberland, who was murdered in 1016 by a Dane, and his third wife Aelfgifu, daughter of King Ethelred the Unready. This descent is, of course, impossible, as Robert was the grandson and not the son of Dolfin, and Dolfin was the son of Uchtred and not of Gospatric. Furthermore, the chronology is impossible.

Rowland in his "House of Nevill" (1830) and Shirley in his "Noble and Gentle Men of England" follow Dugdale, but make Robert fitz Meldred the grandson, instead of the son of Dolfin, by inserting a Meldred between them.

Drummond in his "Noble British Families" (1842) offers still another solution, and he has been followed by Searle in his "Anglo-Saxon Bishops, Kings, and Nobles" (Cambridge, 1899). According to them the family did not descend from Meldred, son of Crinan, but from his father-in-law, Earl Uchtred, through his son Gospatric by his second wife, Sigen, daughter of Styrt, son of Ulf. This Gospatric is known to have had a son Uchtred, who was the father of Eadulf "Rus", who on 14 May 1080 murdered Bishop Walcher. According to their pedigree, Eadulf was the brother of Dolfin, the grandfather of Robert fitz Meldred. Again no proof is offered, and if this were so, a man, who was active in 1080, was the uncle of a man who died in 1183, which is unlikely from a chronological point of view. (Round, op. cit., pp. 488-490; N.C.P., vol. IX, p. 494 and notes). However the names of Meldred, Dolfin, and Patric, which occur among the descendants of Earl Uchtred and his son-in-law Meldred, son of Crinan, would indicate a descent from this family, and especially from Meldred, son of Crinan. Meldred, which is a very rare name, is not of English origin but Scottish, and is found only in the line of Meldred son of Crinan. It appears to be a form of the Celtic Malcolm. It would, accordingly, seem that Uchtred, the first known ancestor of the Nevills, who was born well back in the eleventh century must, in some way, have descended from Meldred, son of Crinan. Consequently, some examination of the family of Meldred, son of Crinan and his wife Ealdgyth of Northumberland, is indicated.

Meldred was a younger son of Abbot Crinan, and his wife was a daughter of Earl Uchtred, by his third wife Aelfgifu, daughter of King Athelred II, and Earl Uchtred was killed in 1016. It is reasonable, therefore, to assume that she was born shortly before her father's death, about 1010-1015, and that she married Meldred about 1030-1040. Their son Gospatric would have been born about 1040. Shortly after the Conquest, in 1067, he received the Earldom of Northumberland from King William, but having joined the Northern revolt in 1071 he was deprived of his earldom in 1072 and fled to Scotland, where he died soon after, about 1075 (N.C.P., vol. IV, p. 504). Earl Gospatric had at least three sons, the eldest, Dolfin, was Earl of Cumberland about 1092, Waltheof, the second, was Lord of Allendale, and the third, Gospatric II, who was, apparently, Earl of Dunbar in Scotland, was one of the Scottish commanders at the Battle of the Standard, 22 Aug. 1138, where he was killed. He was the ancestor of the great Scottish house of Dunbar. The younger Gospatric must, therefore, have been born shortly before his father's death, about 1072-75 (cf. N.C.P., vol. IV, pp. 504/5).

In 1945 Sir William G. Gibson published, in Archaeologia Aeliana (4th ser., vol. XXIII, p. 8 sq.), an important paper entitled "The

Neville

NEAGA 106

Manor of Winlaton" (in Ryton parish, co. Durham), in which he throws light on the question of the paternity of Ughtred, the first known ancestor of the Nevills. In the Feodarium Dunelm (p. 136 and preface p. 38-41, Surtees Soc.), there is a charter of 1082 (gr., ca. 1084 or soon after) of William de St. Calais, Bishop of Durham, purporting to give the monks part of the vill of Catton (Newton Kotton), one part of which he had obtained in exchange from Mel-dred, for the vill of Winlaton. Canon Greenwall has shown that this charter was a forgery, but, as Sir William points out, it does not necessarily follow that the statement of the exchange is false, and Sir William presents ample evidence to show that for centuries the Nevills held the manor of Winlaton. A charter in the New-minster Cartulary (p. 43, Surtees Soc.) shows that Robert fitz Meldred gave the Newminster monks lands, which from their description can be shown to have been in Winlaton. The Survey of Bishop Paisy in 1183 shows that at that time the manor had not been granted out by the Bishop, but was leased to some un-named person (Baldon Bk., Surtees Soc., vol. 25, p. 69). In 1226 John Kidel, who held the manor of Denton, on the north side of the Tyne, opposite to Winlaton, complained that Robert de Nevill (grandson of Robert fitz Meldred), together with Everard de Bladon (Bladon is in Winlaton) and William, his brother-in-law, had thrown down his fish weir in the Tyne between mid-stream and his fee (Northbld. Assize Roll, Surtees Soc., vol. 88, pp. 14, 15, 99). In 1275 the Northumbrian jurors, who were making an inquest on behalf of the Crown into purprestures and other injuries done to the Crown, found that Robert de Nevill, who was entitled to one-third part of the water of the Tyne from Edwinstre (Hedwin Streams) towards Lynemouth to the west, had taken a half and more. It further appeared that the tenants of the Bishop of Durham and of the Prior of Durham had exceeded their rights in the same water (Rot. Hund., Rec. Com., vol. II, p. 23). From this it may be deduced that the Bishop, the Prior, and Robert de Nevill's rights in the water had a common origin and that the Bishop had granted, including the right to the bed of the river to midstream, all that he had as parcel of the manor of Winlaton to Robert de Nevill. In 1325, in consideration of the release by Ralph de Nevill (more properly Ranolph, grandson of Robert, see N.C.I., vol. IX, p. 497) of a yearly payment of £20 from the Palatine Exchequer, the Bishop granted the said Ranolph a release of a like sum for life, the yearly rent of the manor of Winlaton (Cal. Pat. R., Edw. II). After Ranolph's death the manor was again held by rental of £20. When the inq. p. m. of John Lord Nevill (grandson of Ranolph) was taken in 1388, he was found to have held the manor of Winlaton of the Bishop by a yearly payment of £20 (Durham Rec. Claes. 3, Reg. 2, fo. 110). The Nevills continued to hold the manor long after.

This evidence presented by Sir William shows that the Nevills evidently inherited their rights in Winlaton from that Meldred, who, in or about 1084, received the vill from the Bishop, and so we have the name of the father of the Ughtred, who heads the Nevill pedigree. Sir William makes this Meldred the son of another Meldred and the latter the son of Meldred fitz Crinan, but offers no evidence on this point. Returning now to the proved pedigree of the early lords of Raby, we see that Robert fitz Meldred, who died between 1242-1248, was already of age in 1194/5, when he had seisin of his father's lands; so he must have been born shortly prior to 1174, and probably about 1170-74. His father Meldred, who died in or about 1183, was probably born about 1130-1140, and his father, Dolfin, who received Staindropshire in 1131, was probably born about 1100-1110. Accordingly, his father Ughtred would be born about 1075-1080, and his father, the Meldred, who occurs about 1084, would be born about 1050. It would seem, therefore, that this Meldred of 1084 was probably the son, rather than the grandson of Meldred fitz Crinan, but that otherwise the pedigree presented by Sir William is probably correct. This affiliation of the Meldred of 1084 is, admittedly, conjectural but in view of the nomenclature and of the fact that, in 1131, Dolfin, when he received Staindropshire, held also both in England and Scotland, it would seem to be highly probable. Furthermore, it satisfies the exigencies of chronology. It is to be hoped that the northern antiquaries may yet discover proof that Meldred fitz Crinan had a son of the same name.

It appears that Dolfin, who received Staindrop from Prior Algar in 1131 had probably held there before this date, as in King Henry's confirmation charter to Bishop Ralf Flambard restoring Staindrop to St. Cuthbert of 1128/9 there is mention of the land there which Dolfin held (cf. Round's "Commune of London", p. 288). "The Life of St. Cuthbert" (Surt. Soc.) describes Dolfin as a turbulent baron, whose death was foretold by the Saint. Dolfin must have died shortly after he was granted Staindrop, as Meldred, son of Dolfin (evidently an infant, as sometimes happened), witnessed a charter of Bishop Geoffrey (1133-14 May 1141), which refers to the land which Cliburnus, son of Alstan, held of the Bishop (Feodarium Prioratus Dunelmensis, p. 140). The Liber Vitae of Durham (Surt. Soc., p. 146) records the obit of Ughtred, son of Meldred. The Chronicle of Prior Richard of Hexham (Surt. Soc.) records that shortly after the Battle of Northallerton (1139) Eggar, bastard son of Earl Gospatric of Dunbar, together with Robert Ughtred, son of Meldred, committed many outrages around Durham and Hexham (p. 95). This Ughtred can hardly be the father of Dolfin, who was apparently dead at this date and who would hardly have devastated the neighborhood of Durham, as the family was on excellent terms with the monks there. These men will be considered below.

The Feodarium Prioratus Dunelmensis (Surt. Soc.) contains a number of references to certain persons, who appear to have been related to the above family. In the spurious charter of Bishop William (ca. 1084), above cited, the Bishop conveys to the monks a part of Newton Ketton which he obtained by purchase from Edmund, son of Alstan, and among the donors named in this same charter was Scot, son of Alstan, who gave Aclen. Gilbert and Gilbert, sons of Scot, witnessed Prior Algar's grant of Staindrops to Dolfin, son of Ughtred (Feod. Prior. Dunelm., p. 56). In the forged charter to Robert de Unfreville (ca. 1090-1100), Meldred, son of Alstan, is mentioned as the dispossessed lord of Redesdale (cf. Dugdale's Baronage, vol. I, p. 504).

It may be suggested that Alstan (Alstan) was still another son of Meldred, son of Crinan, and that Robert and Ughtred, sons of Meldred, named by Prior Richard as marauders of about 1139, were the sons of the dispossessed lord of Redesdale. Alstan was, apparently, dead by 1084 and a part of Newton Ketton had passed from him to his son Edmund, the other part being held by Meldred, his suggested brother and the ancestor of the Nevills.

[Notes: Since the above paper was written an important note upon the wife of Meldred fitz Dolfin and mother of Robert fitz Meldred, by Charles Travis Clay, B.S.A., Librarian of the House of Lords and editor of "Early Yorkshire Charters", has appeared in the Journal of the Yorkshire Archaeological Society (vol. XXV, p. 100). In this note Mr. Clay shows that the wife of Dolfin was the daughter of John de Stuteville, the lord of Long Lawford, Newbold-on-Avon, and Cosford, all in co. Warwick, and that she married Meldred about 1170-73. This John de Stuteville was a younger son of the second Robert de Stuteville of the great Yorkshire house of Stuteville, and his wife Embergan. The family of the Stutevilles will be considered by Mr. Clay in the forthcoming volume of "Early Yorkshire Charters".]

Clavering Ancestry

Norman People p. 210 says Clavering, a branch of the De Vesci + De Burgh - see VESEY

Foster - Feudal Courts of Arms:

Vesey, or De Vesci, a baronial name. The elder branch of the family of De Burgh. Serlo de Pembroke, or de Burgh, who appears to have been one of those who accompanied Arnulph de Montgomery to the conquest of Pembroke c. 1090, was high in favour with Henry I, and held from him Burgh and Knardesburgh, Yorkshire (Rot. Pip. 31 Hen. I.; Mon. i. 743). He had a son, Osbert, who was d. before 1130 (Rot. Pip.), when Eustace, son of John, brother of Serlo, was constituted his heir. Osbert, his nephew, had been justiciary with him in York before 1130 (Rot. Pip.). He was probably ancestor of the Lords Pons, or Poyntz, of Gloucester. It appears that Serlo and John his brother, and a third brother (the father of Osbert), were sons of Osbert Fitz-Pons, or De Pons, who is mentioned t. William I. See CLIFFORD.

Eustace Fitz-John above mentioned m. the heiress of Vesey, and acquired with her the barony of Alnwick. His son assumed the name of Vesey. It is needless to state the details of the history of this family, which appear in Dugdale and Banks. On the extinction of the direct male line 1295, the next heir male was descended from William de Vesey, brother of Eustace II. and of Warin (whose descendant in the female line, John de Aton, inherited the estates). William paid a fine 1199 in Northumberland (Hodgson, iii., iii., 65); and occurs again there in 1200 (Ib. 74). In 1348 Alicia was widow of William de Vesey (Ib. i., iii., 76). In 1340 Robert Vesey occurs (Ib. iii., ii., 316); and in 1421 Agnes Vesey (iii., ii. 316). We next find the family in Durham; John Veysey being of Coniscliffe 1436, where the family bore the arms of De Vesey (Surtees, iii. 379). Another branch was of Newlands, Durham, c. 1500, from which descend the Viscounts de Vesey (Durham Visit. 1615).

Clavering, Sir John de, 2nd baron, FITZROBERT LE FITZROGER—bore, at the battle of Falkirk 1298 and at the siege of Carlaverock 1300 (when he assumed the name of Clavering by the King's command), quarterly or and gules, a baston sable, a label (3) azure at Falkirk and vert at Carlaverock (F.) wrongly blazoned in Harl. MS. quarterly or and gules fretty argent. See FITZ ROGER. The antient coat, vair, a chief gules; Nobility Roll 1299.

Clavering, Sir John, banneret—(H. vi. Roll) bore, quarterly or and gules a bend sable, Arundel Roll; a baston in Ashmole Roll. ROBERT bore a bendlet; Surrey and Grimaldi Rolls.

Clavering, Sir Allen—bore, at the siege of Calais 1345, quarterly argent and gules, on a bend sable three mullets of the first. The metal is altered to or in the Ashmole MS. (F.) in which the mullets are both argent and or. Sir ALEXANDER, an Essex Knight, bore this coat (E. II. Roll), with the metal or, in the Parliamentary Roll.

Fitz Roger, Sir Robert le, banneret, lord of Clavering—bore, at the battle of Falkirk 1298, and at the siege of Carlaverock 1300, quarterly or and gules a baston sable (F.); signed, but did not seal, the letter to the Pope 1301; Nobility, Parliamentary, and other Rolls. Ascribed also to JOHN (?), in the Ashmole Copy of the Dering Roll; same as Sir ROGER LE FITZ JOHN. See also Sir JOHN DE CLAVERING.

Fitz Roger, Rauf le—(H. III. Roll) bore, vair, a chief gules (F.); St. George Roll; ascribed also to JOHN, Baron FITZ ROGER, in the 2nd Nobility Roll 1299. See also CLAVERING and FITZ BARNARD.

Fitz Barnard, Ralf le—(H. III. Roll) bore, vair, on a chief gules a cross patonce argent. (F.) St. George Roll. See FITZ ROGER.

CORBET

Coat of Arms of the Corbets of Caux: OR, a ^{Corbyr}Corbyn (raven) SA (the original), as of 1297. Above are embelished by two ravens, then six, and a bordure engrailed sable.

The Corbet family came from Pays de Caux, Normandy, believed 'to be of remote Scandinavian antiquity.'

- ① Corbet Le Normant and two of his sons Robert & Robert soon after the Conquest to assist Earl Roger de Montgomery in the government of Shrewsbury. Robert (first son) was rewarded by King Henry I with vast estates - may be because his daughter Sibyl was the King's mistress.
- ② Roger de Corbet m (). (3) William Corbet was seated at Wattleborough (Cotbush).
- ④ Sir Robert Corbet m () inherited the castle & estates of Caux.
- ⑤ Sir Robert Corbet m. Katherine Le Strange da John Lestrange III. He accompanied Duke Richard (the Lion Heart) to Acre (Palestine).

1 Sir Payne Roet, (-ca 1360),

ch. Philippa Roet, m. Geoffrey Chaucer,

2. Catherine Roet.

Sir Payne Roet (Sir Paon de Roet) was King-of-Arms in Guienne, one of the knights of Queen Philippe's household. His daughter, Philippa, married the poet, Geoffrey Chaucer. Payne de Roet was from Hainault, the Queen's wealthy little Netherlands country, but he had married a French girl from Picardy who had died in childbirth. After her death Payne had left his two little daughters with their grandparents when he followed the Queen to England. Payne had been a dashing, handsome man inclined to dress above his station, and thus well fitting his nickname of Paon, the peacock. He found favor with King Edward, who appointed him one of the royal Heralds—King-of-Arms to represent the province of Guienne—then finally so distinguished himself fighting in France just before the peace in 1360 that King Edward had knighted him on the field, along with many other deserving soldiers.

Sir Payne did not live long enough to enjoy either his knighthood or the truce, for a Norman arrow pierced his lungs during a skirmish outside the walls of Paris, and he died with an anguished prayer for the future of his two little daughters in Picardy. Queen Philippa heard of this later when the King returned to England, and was saddened. Soon she sent a messenger across the Channel with letters to Bruges and she entrusted him with various other commissions along the way. The messenger stopped off at a farm in Picardy and found that Sir Payne's family was indeed desperate for help. The plague had returned for a second time that winter, and had recently struck the household. The grandparents had died of it, and all the servants. No one was left but Payne's two small daughters, and one, the younger, had been stricken too, but had miraculously recovered, though she was still very ill. They were being reluctantly tended by a neighbor. These little girls were aged thirteen and ten. The elder was named Philippa, for the Queen who had been her father's patroness, and the younger was Catherine. Finding them completely orphaned, and knowing the Queen's good heart, the messenger carried the children back to England with him.

Of this voyage across the Channel and her arrival in a foreign country, or of the jolting ride through pouring rain to the royal palace at Eltham, and eventual reception by the Queen, Catherine remembered almost nothing, for she had been ill the whole time with a wasting fever and bloody flux. The Queen had her carried to a forester's cottage where the goodwife, skilled with herbs, had managed to nurse the child back to health. By that time the Queen had moved to her favorite palace of Woodstock and had taken little Philippa with her in her household. When told that Catherine had recovered, she sent letters arranging for the child's admission at Sheppey Priory. There Catherine spent the next five years. She was summoned by the Queen, before her sixteenth birthday, and became the bride of Sir Hugh Swynford.

Catherine Roet was born about 1350, probably in Hainault. She married first, when she was about 16 years old, Sir Hugh Swynford, who died about September 1371. She married second, on 13 Jan 1396, as his third wife, John of Gaunt. Catherine, who had been governess to his children, lived openly as mistress of John of Gaunt for many years, although his second wife did not die until 1394. All of their children were born before their marriage. John of Gaunt astonished the world and scandalized the members of the royal family by marrying his concubine. His estrangement from the King did not last long. The children were legitimated by Pope Boniface IX, in September 1396, and, as a mark of favor, King Richard enacted the legitimation of the children in England, with the consent of parliament, in February 1397. John of Gaunt died in 1399, 59 years of age. Catherine died in Lincolnshire, 10 May 1403, and was buried in Lincoln Cathedral. Catherine's sister, Philippa, was the wife of the poet, Geoffrey Chaucer.

Re #16 & 17 on reverse

- ① William Mallet (207) m. Esilie Caspin, dau of Gilbert Caspin 1

He was probably descended from a Scandinavian prince & Captain of first Duke Rollo - on his mother's side he was French - she was probably dau of Leofric, Earl of Mercia before the Conquest and wife Godgifu - the former Lady Godiva!

William Mallet was one of the most interesting characters during the Battle of Hastings 1066 - nearly killed also twice killed himself but rescued by Hap de Maffett & William Vipont. He was told by Wm the Conqueror to take charge of the body of dead King Harold - later taken to and the Abbey accompanying of the "Harpy of the White" finally he received the shroud of Ygdrasil and gave last gifts there. See manuscript details G & S line 809.

It is also Esilie Caspin was descended in the female line from Rollo II Duke of Normandy.
They had several children - one of them, Lucia Mallet m. a 100 Follenbos.

Could she have been an ancestress of our Anne Telford?

- ② Gilbert Mallet (16 reverse) m. the daughter #17 of Roger Corvallis

Gilbert was one of the Normans invited by Henry & English assisting the Conqueror 1066.
Doubtless he saved him the capture in 8 months!

THE NORMAN PEOPLE

Percy. It has been noticed elsewhere (Chapter III.) that the early Percy pedigree is not authentic. The real origin may now be considered. Percy after 1026 became the property of a branch of the Tessons, the greatest baronial house in Normandy, and so continued in the reign of Richard I. (Stapleton, Mag. Rot. Scac. Norm. 1. lxxxiii., 2. xiii.) Ralph Tesson was of Anjou in the tenth century. Ralph Taxo, his son, witnessed with Fulco, Count of Anjou, a charter of King Robert 1028 (Gall. Christ. viii. 297 Instr.). He, or his father, acquired a barony in Normandy, perhaps by marriage, and founded the abbey of Fontenay (Gall. Christ. xi. 413); and in 1047 Ralph Tesson of Cinquelaies led 120 knights of his dependence to aid Duke William at the battle of Val des Dunes (De Ger-ville, Anc. Chateaux). The Tesson barony 1165 consisted of 60 knights' fees (Feod. Norm., Duchesne).

From this House descended the MARMIONS, of whom William Mar-milon of Fontenay (a Tesson estate) witnessed a charter of Ralph Tesson, probably his brother, in 1070 (Gall. Christ. xi. 413). The BYRONS seem to have been another branch. The Percys probably derive from Ernegis or Erneis Tesson, brother of Ralph and co-founder of Fontenay 1050 (Gall. Christ. xi. 413). He had William, Serlo, and Ralph de Percy, who came to England 1066, and from whom the English Percys descended. The arms of these families show their common origin. The Tessons bore a fesse, the Marmions the same, the Percys a fesse indented, the Percys of the South fessy or barry, and the Byrons bendy for fessy. The distinction is chiefly made by tinctures

De Clares lineage

The Clares were part of the norman descent family descended from Rollo. We start with

- ① The Clares' grandfather, Deke Richard I, the "father" who married Emma, Countess of Angoulême.
- ② Godfrey de Eu (d. 1066) ca 960-1066, Count of Brionne & Eu
- ③ Godfrey de Brionne (d. 1066-1068) He was murdered while was guarding young Duke William (later Henry I) His 2 sons fled to the Court of Baldwin, Count of Flanders for protection.
- ④ Sir Richard of the Godfrey married the Countess to the King's daughter.

Life of Eleanor Pagnings

The first known ancestor was Raimond in Normandy, who may have been connected to the Warennes (see Pagnings line 10-30) who were shirt-tail cousins of Norman Dukes. Son William may have gone to Hastings to battle (1066). Domesday Book shows that as "tenant" our William held Pagnings and Pangdean, etc in Essex, plus lands in Norfolk & Suffolk, all of which he really owned and took their name from Pagnings, their Manor.

This section is about the ancestors of Eleanor Pagnings, the last of her line. Over the last few centuries the powerful and wealthy families were not just knights but members of parliament, usually acquainted with royalty - perhaps as a result of their prowess in warfare, in which they were engaged so often that half of them died in battle. Her father,

Sir Richard de Pagnings was killed while sieging Orleans 10 June 1429 against 17-year-old Joan of Arc and her soldiers. Our Eleanor, his only child, was about four years old.

As eldest son, Sir Richard had been in line to inherit the many baronial manors of his father, Sir Robert de Pagnings (1382-1446). Instead little Eleanor was to be sole heiress when he died. Her mother when she was young was not involved. Eleanor Beaufort (m) Sir John de Arundel, (m) Robert Pagnings, (m) Walter de Haughey etc died 1449. She died at August 1450 and was buried beside her first husband at Arundel.

No one expected wealthy Sir Robert to die right away, but little Eleanor, future Baroness Pagnings was such a fine catch that even the powerful Sir Henry Percy, Earl of Northumbria arranged a marriage between his eldest son, another Henry de Percy, age 14 and Eleanor Pagnings age about 12 - on 15 June 1435. They received her inheritance in November 1446. ~~The~~ lands included the baronies of Pagnings, Fitz-Pagner and Bryan with estates in Kent, Sussex, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Somerset.

If you look at the map in the front of this book you will see that Northumbria is the northernmost county of England, on the border of Scotland, which was constantly attacking. In May 1449 young Henry Percy joined Sir Robert Ogle raided Scotland burnt Dunbar. The Scots retaliated by burning Alnwick & other areas. His father died in 1455 (Battle of St Albans), and now he was Third Earl of Northumbria. All this was also in the War of the Roses, and he supported the Lancastrian side. Fighting for them he was killed at Towton 20 March 1461. His estates were confiscated, family banished & eldest son, another Henry Percy imprisoned in the Tower of London for 4 years, then until October 1469 when he was given back the Earldom & lands. Thelwaste children, two sons including this one & four girls. One ancestor was #4, Margaret de Percy who married son William Gascoigne (Talbot's line). - See Key. Eleanor died in 1484. If she had lived another year, King Henry Tudor would have ended the Wars! What a life she led!

Treaty of Verdun
Treaty of Verdun was signed dividing the land of the Franks into the Western Franks centered at Paris, the Middle Franks centered at Aachen, and the Eastern Franks centered at Regensburg. The Western part was bound by the rivers Rhine, the Moselle & the Elbe, the latter being the dividing line. Our Lords of Gael comprised more than 400 parishes.

P. 10-20-24-28

Eden is then Malcolm II, names of the Queens are missing. This is a lineage, not a list of Kings. Early Gaelic people lived in Dalriada then in present Argyll, NE Ireland. About 500 AD a group settled in Argyll Scotland across a "narrow channel" still called Dalriada until 575 when King Aiden declared its independence (- also spelled Aidan).

1. Eochaid Muinmeaor, King of Dalriada in Ireland.
2. Earc (-474) King of Dalriada
3. Fergus, King of Dalriada established his followers in Argyll in Scotland c. 475
4. Domungast, King of Dalriada m. Folclem Foltchain, dau of Brion who was the son of Fochaid Muinmeaor, half brother of the famous Niall of Nine Hostages. (Wales)
5. Gabran, King of Dalriada m. Lleirid, daughter of Brachonfrach who gave name to Black Loch
6. Aedan (d. 588) King of Dalriada, declared independence - ruled 37 years. Connected to St. Columba.
7. Eochaid Beidre (d. 629) King of Dalriada - also called King of the Picts
8. Donald IV Breck, King of Dalriada 629-692 called "the Foolish" Celtic King of Scottish Dalriada, expanding. Defeated by Angles of Bernicia who extended to the Firth, and Congall Cleon, King of the Picts, plus the Irish who wanted to rule in Scotland! Donald was defeated & Edinrygh besieged. (He must have been heroic to go through all that!) but he was slain 4 years later.
9. Domungast - did not rule.
10. Eochaid II (c. 692) King of Dalriada
11. Eochaid III, King 721-733
12. Aedh Find "the white" ruled 30 years established the custom of "tenantry"
13. Eochaid "the Poisonous" King of D. 781
14. Alpin (-834) King of Dalriada Scots, slain in battle with Picts in Galloway
15. Kenneth I Mac Alpin (-860) King of the Scots & Picts 834-861, m. 7 daughters of Donald of the Isles (Dalriada) leading to a united kingdom called Alpin & moved throne to Scone. Died of a tumor 860.
16. Constantine I (-877) King of Scotland (Alpin) 863-77 now including region north of the Firth & Clyde that suffered from Norsemen. One of his sons, Nasse King of Dublin occupied some Pict areas. Halfdan ravaged further south. They slew Constantine in 877.
17. Donald II (-900) King of Scotland ruled 863-77. Danish Vikings were now gathering all over Britain. They sacked Dublin. King Alfred confined them to eastern part of England. Northumbria, then Scottish was attacked. Donald died of pure exhaustion rather than battle.
18. Malcolm I (-934) King of Scotland ruled 943-54 fought the Danes continually in many areas, often with the help of English kings. He was killed by men of Moray.
19. Kenneth II fought Britons of Strathclyde, & secured Lothian, etc. the consolidated control Scotland.
20. Malcolm II (-1035) King of Scotland (903-34) m. a daughter of Duke of Burgundy. They were #18 & #19 of P. 10-20-24.

Aethelred, Duke of Mercia #18 c. 912, was son of Hugh the Great, Duke of Mercia. His wife #19 was Aethelred's daughter King Alfred the Great King of England. Soon after the King died, war with the Danes broke out again. Her brother, King Edward the Elder and her husband were making some progress but the Duke died in 912. Though Princess Aethelred was a woman, she valiantly took his place. Brother & Sister cooperated well though they each had an army, using new tactics, driving the Danes further East, or even left England. She died in 912 and her brother in 924.

1 Agnes de Essex

When she was three years old, Agnes de Essex's father handed her over to Geoffrey de Vere as his future wife. Geoffrey committed her to his brother Aubrey for safe keeping until she was six. Then he took her to his house, where he treated her as his wife. Agnes declared that she had never agreed to marry Geoffrey, and had written to her father that she would never do so. When she was about eleven years old, Agnes married Geoffrey's brother, Aubrey, as his third wife. Aubrey de Vere tried to repudiate her within a year, ostensibly because she had lived with his brother Geoffrey. The real reason was because of her father's disgrace and ruin. Agnes appealed from the Bishop of London's court to Rome, and in 1171 or 1172 Alexander III directed the Bishop to order Aubrey to take his wife back. The Bishop wrote that Aubrey kept his wife shut up and did not allow her to attend church or go out, and refused to cohabit with her, and exhorted him to treat her properly. The Bishop was to direct Aubrey to restore her to her conjugal rights within twenty days, under pain of interdict and excommunication.

Aubrey de Vere died 26 Dec 1194. Agnes survived him, and was buried with him at Colne Priory.

- ① Tharold de Pont Aumeu in Avelino, a sister of the Duchess Gannoe ^{Wife of Duke Richard I} (said to be son of Toy but source not entirely trustworthy) (1092-1)
- ② Humphrey de Vielles (d. ca 1090) in Aubrey de la Hoge
He was Seigneur of Vielles + Pont Aumeu + follower of Duke Robert, the Conqueror's father.
They on # 16 + 17 on reverse

Ewyas The castle of Ewyas Harold was named for Harold # 6 below. The family originally lived in the barony of Gwal in Brittany.

- ① Raoul de Goug (d 936 AD) Count of Estravaux + Amiens, Valois + Verin.
He m. Edgogorde, dau (niece) of Ermenfrid, Count of Amiens. She was probably a Carolingian Princess.
After his death she m.2) Walter.
